Miners Are Walking Out In Protest As Curbs On Labor Ride Into Law

SENATORS 'SEAL VICTORY'—Joining in a three-way handshake Monday after the Senate voted into law the Taft-Hartley labor bill are Republican Sens. Ives (New York), Taft (Ohio) and Ball (Minnesota). They led the fight in the Senate to make the curb on labor unions the law of the land, and the climax was overriding of the veto Monday by a better margin than even the bill's backers expected.

Senate Overrides Veto, 68 to 25; Unions Rumble, 27 Pits Closed

Rein checks on unionism's steel got the force of Federal law Monday over President Truman's robust protest, but even as exponents of the Taft-Hartley bill were hailing a new era of peace in worker-management relations, a spreading wave of protest strikes echoed mounting reaction. At least 27 coal mines had been shut down.

In overriding a veto by six votes—better than even the foes of the closed shop expected—exponents of "a better balance between union and management power" echoed in the Senate a previous House favor for the bill. The Senate voted 68 to 25 to cast aside the President's plea that the union curbs are "unworkable" and will precipitate even more strikes.

The President's view gained some credence a few hours after the labor bill became law, as United Mine Workers (AFL) began walking out in protest. The labor control bill appeared to be facing a critical test before it was scarcely dry on the books.

Even Jimmy Petrillo, radio music overlord, got another rebuff Monday when the Supreme Court upheld the law loosening his grip on orchestra staffing.

Top Court for Petrillo Ban

WASHINGTON, June 23—(UP)—The Supreme Court Monday upheld the constitutionality of the Lea Act which outlaws Music Czar James C. Petrillo's practice of forcing radio stations to employ unneeded "stand-by" musicians.

After disposing of that and almost a score of other cases on a crowded calendar, the justices adjourned for their summer recess which will last until October. Their five-to-three decision against Petrillo dealt only with his broad constitutional challenge of the Lea Act. But it left the doors open to a further court test of the law's constitutionality by remanding the case to the Chicago Federal District Court where the government first filed suit to make the defendant boss of the musicians' union obey the law.

The District Court, which had sustained Petrillo's constitutional challenge, was directed to pass on his specific application of the law, after which the Supreme Court may be asked again for a final ruling on constitutionality.

Such a test might come if the Chicago court interpreted the act as prohibiting picketing of radio stations which refused to hire Petrillo's "standby" musicians. The law itself does not mention picketing, although the government charged that Petrillo used pickets to coerce the radio broadcasters.

The tribunal also settled in favor of the government the California Tidelands oil dispute which rocked the multimillion-dollar oil industry and led to the resignation of Harold L. Ickes as Secretary of the Interior.

The court ruled six to two that submerged lands inside the three-mile limit off the California coast and the multimillion-dollar oil deposits they contain belong to the United States.

Taft's Pleas Given Credit

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—The Taft-Hartley Labor Bill became the law of the land Monday.

The Senate overrode President Truman's veto and his all-out opposition, 68 to 25.

This was six votes more than the required two-thirds majority—more even than the bill's supporters had expected.

And the chamber spurned a final appeal which the President sent by Democratic Leader Barkley, Kentucky, two hours before the roll call.

The President insisted that "this dangerous legislation" will hurt "our national unity" and so "render a distinct disservice not only to this nation but to the world."

Sen. Taft, Republican, Ohio, told the Senate just before it voted, however, that the GOP Congress would "be held deluged" if it failed to pass the bill.

He shouted that "unions are big business" and "should have the same responsibility as corporations."

The outcome was Mr. Truman's sharpest setback at the hands of the Republican-controlled Congress, elected last November.

It was a tremendous victory for Taft, widely mentioned as a possible GOP presidential candidate.

He had sponsored the bill with Rep. Hartley, Republican, New Jersey.

The Senate showdown found 20 Democrats going along with 48 Republicans to override. For up the President and his veto.

Twenty-two Democrats and three Republicans.

No sooner had the vote been taken and the bill passed than William Green, President of the AFL, promised an immediate campaign for its repeal. His statement said that "labor will never be held back by this law."

Lewis Silent, Air Tense

WASHINGTON, June 23—(UP)—The Taft-Hartley Labor Bill was scarcely dry on the books Monday night when members of the United Mine Workers (AFL) began a spreading wave of protest strikes which may touch off the first major test of the act's power to deal with crippling walkouts.

The first demonstration came at Birmingham, Ala., where the Alabama Mining Institute said there was a possibility that 75 percent of the UMW's 20,000 members would be out by Tuesday. Some 8,000 miners were on strike at Pittsburgh and walkouts also were in progress in Virginia and West Virginia.

Fourteen mines were idle in Alabama, eight in Pennsylvania, four in Virginia and at least one in West Virginia.

Some eight hours after the controversial measure became law, an estimated 20,000 miners had gone on strike.

In addition, the San Francisco CIO council asked CIO Pres. Philip Murray to call a 24-hour nationwide work stoppage to protest the new law. Murray said here that he knew "nothing of it."

United Mine Workers Pres. John L. Lewis had "no comment on the coal walkouts."

Harry Bridges, militant West Coast leader of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CIO), meanwhile served notice that his organization would "fight back by organizing, striking and picketing."

The Birmingham and Pittsburgh walkouts—with one exception—were in captive mines serving steel companies in those areas. The Birmingham walkout began abruptly within an hour after the Senate overrode the veto.

The Pittsburgh strikes began at three captive mines of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp.

Another War Coming—Scene U. S., Visiting Ordnance Chief Warns

By PAUL JONES

America now is preparing for another war which is coming faster than anyone thinks. It will be fought in this country and it will be more horrible than anything we can imagine. Those statements were made Monday by Maj. Gen. Everett S. Hughes, Chief of Ordnance, United States Army, after he had inspected the Atlanta Ordnance Depot, near Conley.

Every civilian automatically will become a soldier when war comes, said the bronzed, six-foot-three hero of two wars. This next war will not be an industrial war, but rather a war in which every man, woman and child will be a participant. Time will be the greatest element and "guided missiles and aerial bombs will be the order of the day," the General predicted.

Gen. Hughes said the Army is taking every step possible to be ready, when and if war comes. He said industry and the Army are working together constantly to develop new materials and weapons. Key personnel in industry already have been named by the Army to take up their posts with the military at a moment's notice. Gen. Hughes said, adding that military attaches in all foreign countries are acting as observers to keep us abreast of all the latest weapons and tools of war developed elsewhere.

Stressing the importance of the civilian's role in the next war, Gen. Hughes said he had urged the automotive industry to build cross-country civilian vehicles which would meet all requirements of Army ordnance specifications.

"If we are going to be prepared," he said, "we must have more cross-country vehicles."

Revision Group Votes Exhaustive Tax Study

Georgia's Tax Revision Committee voted Monday to conduct an exhaustive study of present taxation laws by types and to decide what funds are needed for expanded State services before it recommends a new State revenue code.

To aid the program, William M. Lester, of Augusta, was named Executive Secretary of the Commission at an annual salary of $8,000 plus yearly expenses not to exceed $1,500.

Lester, a former legislator from Richmond County, is on leave from the United States Department of Justice, where he served for the past four years as a special assistant to the Attorney General. He was a trial attorney in the anti-trust division.

Although he served two terms in the State House of Representatives and three terms in the Georgia Senate from Richmond County, Lester is not a member of the Cracker Party, political machine which until recently dominated that County.

Nomination of Lester and methods of procedure were contained

June Chill Is Passing, 'Almost Normal' Seen

"Almost normal" temperatures are predicted for the State today, with the U. S. Weather Bureau's forecast reading "partly cloudy and somewhat warmer." By Wednesday afternoon, says the weatherman, the mercury should be back where it belongs.

The low Monday in Atlanta was 57 degrees, about 10 degrees below normal for this time of year, according to the Weather Bureau. The high was 74 degrees. In Atlanta today a high and low of 82 and 60 degrees are expected.

HOW LABOR LAW AFFECTS US ALL

The new labor law, through its effect on unions and employers, will affect the lives of millions. You'll be hearing about it for years.

For that reason The Constitution starts today a series of six stories explaining the main points of the law in easily understood language.

The series has been written by three labor specialists of the Washington staff of the Associated Press: Max Hall, Sterling F. Green and Harold W. Ward. (See Page 6.)

REPORT FROM THE COUNTRY

New Crop, New Income in Floyd

By RALPH MCGILL

OLD DALTON ROAD, Floyd County—A cotton farmer who had to send his whole family, including the small children, into a 50-acre cotton field to put a dab of poisoned moths on each and every cotton plant, with the hope that Brother Boll Weevil would eat it and die, wrote a famous farm couplet, to-wit:

"Some folks say there ain't no hell."

"But they never farmed, so how can they tell?"

Most of those who think of farming in terms of a technicolor movie and wish they had a little farm would do well to dwell only on imaginary farms.

On them the grass always is lush, the Jerseys and Guernseys stand against cloud-piped horizons and the multimillion-dollar crop grows in fields perpetually manicured and plowed.

Three years ago Sidney Lowrey "gritted his teeth and bought a farm."

Before that he had been a "halves farmer." Then he had gone over into Alabama and managed a 200-acre cotton crop.

After that he "gritted his teeth" and bought. We found him down in the bottom lands, along the Oostanaula River, in cotton.

Some of the cotton looked very ragged, and Sidney Lowrey was regarding it as though he might burst into tears.

The lice had been on it. Cotton is such an ornery plant, it is subject to almost everything that man is, including the common cold. The lice had been there and moved on, as they sometimes do not. The cotton will come out, and do all right, but it is discouraging to fight lice, the boll weevil and cool weather.

But his more than 200 acres—which included a fine bottom field of two hybrid corns, all laid by—was interesting chiefly because of seven acres.

They were in sweet potatoes.

Floyd County farm experts, casting about for a new crop, got L. J. Williams from Grayson, where he had promoted and directed, as a vocational agricultural teacher, a successful program in sweet potatoes.

The farm experts had surveyed the County, and determined that sweet potatoes, if fitted into the needs of Floyd County, would be in demand in the amount of 150,000 bushels per year. Yet only 5,000 salable bushels annually had been produced, and they were produced ungraded and not salable to the best advantage.

There is an old saying among the old sweet potato growers that you plant 40 percent more than you need, because 40 percent will rot.

In addition, there was no storage space in the County; and they all had to be sold at harvest.

DeKalb Okays Apartment Plans

The DeKalb County Planning Commission Monday night approved the Highland Park Apartments, a subject to detailed approval.

The North Decatur Road project was submitted by Dewey P. C. McDuffie, Jr., Vice President and General Manager of West Peachtree Hills, Inc., the operating concern. Monday revealed that apartments in the Winston Church-Garden Apartments at Inwood Circle and West Peachtree have been completed with 12 additional units scheduled for completion within 60 days in the project.

The DeKalb Commission, meanwhile, approved a 200-unit North Decatur Road project near Clairmont, to be built of park type construction, costing $9,000 per unit of two and three bedrooms each.

Also approved by the Commission was a $220,000 project on Cumberland Road and Rock Springs Road, near Morningside, on three-year leases.

Disapproved by the Commission because of inadequate transportation for that area, was a smaller 24-unit project slated for Howell Mill Road and North Gatewood.

Petroleum Products' Export Again Placed Under War Controls

WASHINGTON, June 23—(UP)—The Government reimposed wartime controls on exports of petroleum products Monday night in a move apparently aimed at quieting congressional criticism of American oil shipments to Russia.

The controls will not halt all shipments of oil to the Soviet Union, but will make them subject to the discretion of the Commerce Department.

They will become effective June 30, just 24 hours before the emergency law authorizing such export regulation is slated to expire. Congress has been asked to extend the law, and Monday night's move was seen as a maneuver to force the lawmakers' hand.

The move was announced after a series of conferences among officials of the Commerce, State and Interior Departments. It will require shippers to obtain licenses for exports of all motor fuels, including ordinary and aviation gasoline, kerosene, gas oil and distillate fuel, residual fuel oil and blending agents made from petroleum.

Shipments to Canada will not be controlled.

Ramadier Seeks Heavy Tax Increase

PARIS, June 23—(AP)—Premier Paul Ramadier pleaded before a coldly silent French Assembly Monday for a drastic tax increase as thousands of workers demonstrated noisily for four hours in front of the Assembly building.

He met with initial success from the Assembly's financial committee, which reversed an earlier decision and by 22 to 18 votes endorsed a proposed tax measure which would hike the price of bread, milk, tobacco, gasoline and other essential commodities and services.

Ramadier had asked support of the bill to keep France from "going over the precipice." He sought no vote of confidence, but said: "Overthrow us if you want, but don't ask us to carry out a policy which would lead France to disaster."

Poland Asks Removal of British, U. S. Planes

WARSAW, June 23—(AP)—The Polish Ministry of Defense has requested British and American air attaches to remove their planes from Polish territory, it was reported authoritatively Monday.

The Ministry informed the British and American embassies here that improvement of Polish domestic airlines made unnecessary the presence of the planes used by the air attaches on official trips within Poland and to occupied Germany.

The Ministry also was understood to have answered the British and American contention that the planes were needed to enable the air attaches to maintain their required flying time as pilots by indicating that Polish planes could be used by these flyers.

Divorced 12 Years Too Soon; Gets $2,330

LOS ANGELES, June 23—(AP)—Mrs. Catherine Lazzarevich, 44, who discovered she had been divorced 12 years too soon, Monday was awarded $2,330 for her housekeeping services for John Lazzarevich, 49, plumbing contractor.

Superior Judge Charles S. Burnell also ordered the husband to pay $75 a month support for their son, Daniel, 11.

The couple, married 25 years ago, was divorced in 1933 and reconciled in 1935. Mrs. Lazzarevich testified her husband told her there was no need for remarrying as the final decree had never been entered.

Twelve years later she found the divorce was in effect.

ASCAP Charged With Operating World-Wide Cartel

NEW YORK, June 23—(UP)—The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP), which controls music performing rights, Monday was charged by the Government with engaging in a worldwide cartel and hindering the use of both popular and classical music compositions.

Twenty-five foreign musical societies were named defendants with ASCAP in the civil anti-trust suit filed by the Department of Justice in Federal Court here.

The suit charges that ASCAP and the other societies, which operate in Australia, several European and South American countries and Canada, monopolize the circulation of music internationally.

Ben Hillers 'Warring' Over Convict Camp

By DORIS LOCKERMAN

Mt. Gilead Camp Ground is the dusty heirloom treasure of Ben Hill.

In a community where no juke joints, beer halls, nor even a moving picture distract the solid householders, the old camp meeting ground sets a timeless pace of religious hope.

But there is no balm in Gilead for Ben Hill today.

The quiet little neighborhood is at war. It is fighting over Fulton County's Ben Hill Convict Camp. The battle is raging with the same fervor of conviction that filled the Ben Hill Baptist Church to overflowing each night last week for its revival services.

The lines are clearly drawn. To one group, the convict camp is more than a nuisance. It is a drawback. The sight of it is an eyesore and its presence is a stigma. Children, at play on their school grounds, can view it across a valley. Women, they say, are frightened in their homes by escaping prisoners. One leading citizen claims a bullet from a fleeing convict cut a hole in his garage wall, narrowly missing him.

To that group, the growth of Ben Hill has been retarded. They believe it is far better known for its convict hostel than for the pleasant life amid its wooded spaciousness.

They are the Ben Hillers who called upon the Fulton County Commission last Tuesday to urge the abandonment of the camp now in the process of becoming a permanent, escape-proof brick-and-stone institution. They are the

Walked Out on Buggy, Virginia Hill Asserts

PARIS, June 23—(UP)—Virginia Hill, 30, American heiress and playgirl, said Monday that she walked out on her friend, the late Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel, three weeks ago in the course of an argument over his dirty sports shirt.

Virginia hastened to add that "no mistress business" was to be read into her relations with Siegel, who was slain Friday night by rival gangsters while carelessly sitting near a window of her Beverly Hills mansion.

In fact, she continued, she was not "very friendly" with Siegel, despite reports from California that he carried a gold key around his neck with which he let himself in and out of her house. She said his only "mistress" as far as she knew, was his $85,000 Flamingo hotel and gambling casino in Las Vegas, Nev.

Personally, she could never stand the Flamingo. She didn't like the people there and the cat-tus gave her hay fever. She was taking a chance on catching the hay fever when she and Siegel had the argument.

Let's See Now...

For two years Billy Dobson, Druid Hills High School student, has been two badges short of Eagle Scout. His father, W. A. Dobson, Regional Boy Scout Executive for the Southeast, has pinned hundreds of Eagle badges on champion Scouts in the last 21 years, but he had almost given up hope of officiating at a family affair.

About a month ago Billy asked his father if an Eagle could choose the man to give him his pin. His dad said yes. Billy casually unfolded a khaki band virtually covered with round merit badges, including his stumbling block, the little round circle on bird lore. "I choose you!" he said to his father.

Last night, with a Court of Honor from Glenn Memorial Methodist Church flanking the ceremony in the Court House in Decatur, "Dobby" Dobson reached up 2½ inches to pin the top award in Scouting to the blouse of his gangling 17-year-old son.

"This is a very joyous occasion," said Dobson. Billy looked very serious. He turned to a small, intense woman at his side, his first den-leader when he was a Cub Scout.

"This is for you, Mother," he said. He leaned down and pinned a miniature Eagle on her dress.

The Dobson philosophy on father-son relationships: "Get acquainted. Don't be afraid of your teenage offspring. Play with him. Work with him. Give him high ideals to live up to. Give him responsibility. No boy with an objective in life, something to look forward to, ever becomes a juvenile delinquent."

"UTOPIA COULD BE REACHED"

As one brainy (and beautiful) gal wrote Miss Loren Walters last week, "Ever since the first woman cast aside her bedraggled fig leaf in favor of the more fashionable leopard skin, the fair sex has sought to improve itself."

And in Georgia, the f. s. is not making any changes in the old routine.

The very groomed and glamorous Miss Walters, Director of the American Academy of Fashion Modeling here, craned her graceful neck over the top of a pile of letters on "Why I want to be a model," and shrugged. "In a deal like this," she observed, "you can't lose."

If there is any girl in Georgia who does not want to be a model, Miss Walters hasn't crossed her path. In a very brief essay contest, Miss Walters' staff stopped counting when the entries reached 450, from every hamlet and city in Georgia.

Their essays were revealing. They confessed to shreds of beauty, scraps of faith and assurance in themselves, but ended pitifully "I do need more." They pledged their devotion to a profession "where I could look my best, meet people and be sincerely happy and content." One, in a burst of excitement, admitted "Utopia to me would be a world of well-dressed people, and, with the help of models, Utopia could be reached."

Utopian or not, it all boils down to this, says the willowy Miss Walters: "Beauty is an attitude as much as a fact. If a woman knows her posture, her expression, her complexion, her walk is right, she'll stop giggling like an adolescent, jerking around like a colt, and settle down to serenity. A woman who knows she has done all she can do won't worry about what can't be helped."

PERMANENT WAVE BY RADIO WAVE

And now you can get a permanent wave by radio. It's a new electronic invention that figures out, in its cold little nest of tubes and switches, the exact moment when your hair is curly enough and automatically cuts off the current coming your way.

As Miss Marsha Miller, here to demonstrate the new gadget, says: "It takes the guesswork out of the whole thing." Actually the radio looks exactly like a radio, sits remotely aloof from the waving process, connected with the curling hair by only one tentacle. The rest of the curls are simply covered lightly with a square of foil and a cap insulated with red rubber. The operator winds the curls, sets the dial on "fine," "medium," or "coarse," depending on the texture of her customer's hair.

Miss Miller says nobody has taken the radio's Hooper rating yet. "But it ought to be terrific," she remarked. "You know how popular soap operas are."

Composer Wagner's Kin To Face Trial as Nazi

BAYREUTH, Germany, June 23 (AP)—Mrs. Winifred Wagner, widow of the son of Composer Richard Wagner and a close friend of Adolf Hitler, will go on trial Wednesday before a German denazification court as a "major offender."

It was possible that Miss Friedling Wagner, anti-Nazi writer, might fly here from New York for the trial. She wrote "Night Over Bayreuth," in which she accused her mother of handing over the Bayreuth Music Festival to Hitler for propaganda purposes.

U. S. Ships 365,000 Tons Of Food to Germany

BERLIN, June 23 (AP)—The American Military Government said Monday 365,000 tons of food, valued at $48,000,000, arrived in the combined British-American occupation zones of Germany from the United States during the first three weeks of June.

The food was shipped under an accelerated schedule to relieve hunger crises in the two zones.

$3,462,000,000 for the Navy Voted by Senate Committee

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP)—The Senate Appropriations Committee Monday voted $3,462,000,000 in new money for the Navy in the year starting July 1. Sen. Saltonstall, Republican, Massachusetts, said it will give the nation "a powerful, well-balanced fighting fleet" of some 850 craft.

The sum is $176,500,000 more than the House approved. But Saltonstall, Chairman of a Subcommittee which considered the funds, said that $161,000,000 in old unused appropriations for other purposes were cancelled. Thus, he said, the net increase in usable funds is only $15,500,000.

Saltonstall told reporters that the Committee's action permits operation of the same number of ships requested by President Truman in his budget recommendation.

Congress Votes Thanks To Draft Board Members

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP)—Congress officially gave its thanks Monday to the approximately 200,000 citizens who served without compensation in the nation's 6,443 local Selective Service Boards.

Big 3 Meeting in Paris Friday Awaited With Hope by Europe

PARIS, June 23 (AP)—Hopes for a revival of Europe's economy soared Monday night as the Foreign Ministers of Britain, France and Russia made a date to meet in Paris next Friday to discuss the American offer of aid in Continental reconstruction.

The French Government expressed "lively satisfaction" with Russia's agreement to examine the Marshall program. British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin told the House of Commons in London that he "welcomed" Russia's acceptance of a British-French invitation to the conference, and that "I hope good results will follow."

The French Foreign Ministry said sessions would be held in the ornate "Salon de l'Horloge" of the Quai d'Orsay.

The date for the meeting was suggested by Russia in her reply Monday to notes from France and Britain. The French then made the date official by sending out invitations.

The Soviet reply said it was "self-evident" that the task of rehabilitating Europe's economy would be expedited if assistance "were rendered by the United States of America, whose production potentials, far from declining, increased during the war."

The office of French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault declared France would be "happy on this occasion to welcome Messrs. Bevin and Molotov."

Ben Hillers Wage 'War'

ones who authored the broadside which asked the question: "Where is the devil camp?" the ones who staked out temporary signs in their little shopping section and along roadsides proclaiming "Ben Hill, the home of convicts."

To the other group Ben Hill is booming. It appears to be a solid, steady growth backed with money from home-folks themselves. George Waites, a filling station owner, and an old name in the district, is spending $15,000 on a brick building to house a beauty parlor, barber shop, drug store. The building is almost ready for occupancy.

Norton Bros. has just opened a new $30,000 grocery with modern equipment, including a thermo-static sprayer for vegetables.

C. P. Suber, postmaster and grocer, has almost completed a new grocery and feed store, with last-minute equipment. His present site, owned by Dr. Roy McGee, Fulton County Health Officer, will be torn down and replaced with a $25,000 building to house a doctor and a dentist, along with a drug store.

Jack Towns, one of the largest property owners in Ben Hill, has joined with Suber to purchase three acres of frontage in the little shopping section for $10,500, and soon will begin a concrete building for an automobile dealer, a farm equipment dealer, a hardware store, a 10-cent store and a bowling alley. Their investment will likely run to $75,000.

At Mt. Gilead Camp Grounds, a $75,000 hotel and dining room is under way, for the use of Methodists in retreat for the Summer, and for eventual use as an under-privileged children's vacation camp.

Fifty modest homes have been completed on the Lake Niskey Road, and everywhere along the fine lacework of wide, smooth roads, houses are in the last stages of building.

All this, say the merchants, proves Ben Hill is not retarded. They say the Convict Camp, which has a payroll of about 30 Ben Hill men, has brought benefits for the community which never would have come without it. They say it is not objectionable, and that the new brick building going up on the County's acreage will be landscaped and dignified, and nothing to apologize for.

Between these two views runs a whispered stream of off-the-record innuendo all purporting to be the "real story."

The whole thing, say camp defenders, springs from a proposed recreation park the County has offered Ben Hill. Two property owners, they charge, wished to sell the County their land for the park. When the County refused, the disappointed men began their campaign of spite.

Defenders point out the camp burned two years ago, and at that time 116 Ben Hill folks voted to keep it while only 63 voted to banish it. They say the County already has spent $5,000 architect's fees and close to $20,000 for the foundation of the new $68,000 building, and no Ben Hiller has objected to it until last week. They insist it would be bad business for Fulton County's taxpayers and for Ben Hill itself to force the camp out.

Camp opponents ignore these statements. They say they never wanted a permanent "institution," and long ago protested to their local ward heeler to stop the County's new building, without avail. They fear more dangerous convicts will be assigned them under an "escape-proof" arrangement. They say a vote of 179 people on the question is not representative of Greater Ben Hill, with its estimated 5,000 population.

The County Commission is caught amid these two factions. Commissioner Charlie Brown has warned that if the camp is abandoned the prisoners will be turned over to the State, and County public works, already far behind schedule, will drop even farther in arrears. The Commissioners have referred the decision to County Construction Chief W. G. Patton, a Ben Hill resident himself, and he is scheduled to make his recommendation to the Commission on Wednesday.

If he says no camp, the stand-patners say it'll be Katie bar the door.

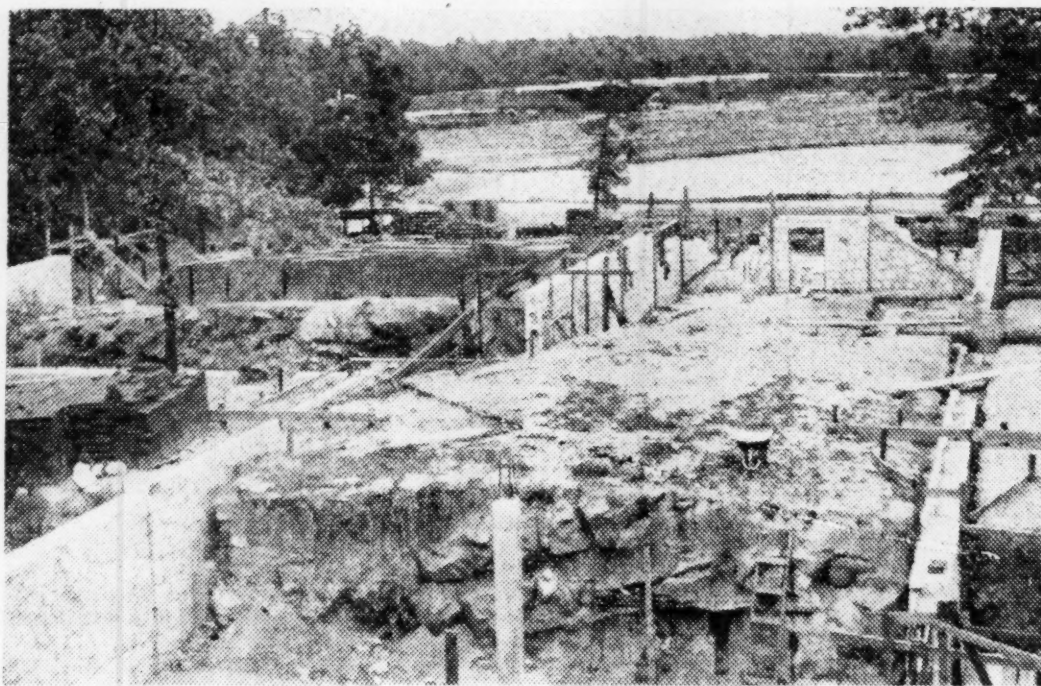

To the others, it'll be home, sweet home.

Inner Circle Democrats Hold Dinner Session

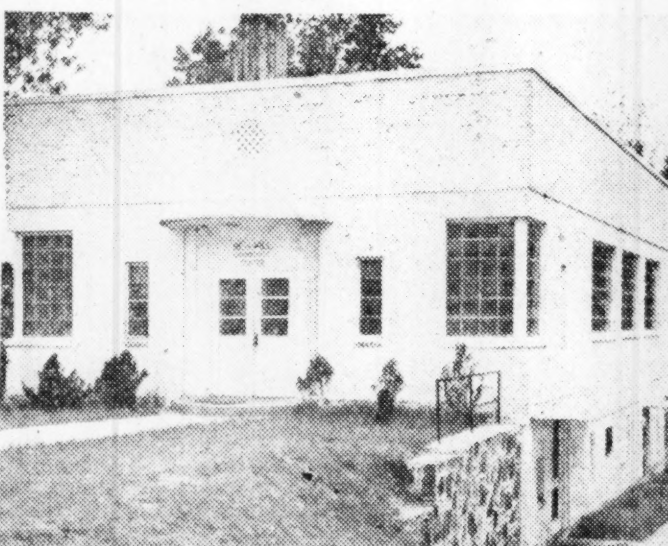

The inner circle of the State Democratic Party met at a dinner session here Monday night and selected 60 members of the State Democratic Executive Committee. The first 60 persons on the 120-member Executive Committee were named at the State convention in Macon this Spring. Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson said at the Capitol Monday names of the 60 chosen would not be released until all accepted. He said the list would be released probably "for Sunday's papers."

BEN HILL IS BUILDING—New brick-front grocery and feed store, owned by C. P. Suber, Ben Hill businessman, and almost ready for occupancy. A second new grocery recently has been opened in Ben Hill by Norton Bros. Suber is Ben Hill's postmaster, and his store also will be the home of the new United States postoffice.

FOUNDATION FOR PERMANENT CONVICT CAMP—The sprawling stone foundation for Ben Hill's convict camp already has been laid, and the builder already has drilled holes into base rock to set plumbing pipes. Brick, sand and concrete are on hand to complete the structure, to cost an estimated $68,000, and house 150 convicts.

BEN HILL'S HEALTH CLUB—The two-story brick community center, used as a clinic and recreation center for the community's Teen Town organization. The woods behind it have been suggested by one Ben Hill faction as the proper place for the 10-acre park proposed for the district by the Fulton County Commissioners.

not exempt its lessor, Atlantic Coast Line, from a 5 1/2 percent levy on net income.

ACL contended that under the State charter the income from the leased line could not be taxed more than one-half of one percent.

Nevertheless, Cook, as Revenue Commissioner, assessed the railroads in 1945 for the full income tax. The case went to court, but by the time it was tried in 1946, M. E. Thompson, now Acting Governor, was Revenue Commissioner. The case was tried in Chatham Superior Court by Judge Robert Humphries, of Swainsboro, who ruled for the railroads.

Judge Humphries unanimously was overruled by the State and United States Supreme Court, the latter decision having been handed down Monday.

The graying Davidson took his praise Monday afternoon from Acting Gov. Thompson who lauded him, Cook, Asst. Atty. Gen. Claude Shaw and Rep. Charles Mason, of Morgan County, for their work in the case.

Thompson praised Mason for his 10-year fight in the Legislature during this time. Mason has introduced bill after bill to tax the railroads.

The test case gave Georgia about $200,000 which it sought as deficiency taxes against the ACL. This was on income derived from the road in 1941, 1942 and 1943. A similar case is pending against the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, which also leased part of the Georgia Railroad.

These cases and others involving smaller leases should net the State "at least" $1,000,000, Revenue officials estimated.

vest time, which flooded the market and brought the price down to about $1 per bushel.

So, farmers ignored sweet potatoes.

But in 1946 Sidney Lowrey got some potato slips from a disease-free farm in Louisiana. He was interested in doing this because on the farm he bought there was a sweet potato curing house.

He planted four acres.

He got $3 a bushel for the cured potatoes; and then put out potato beds. This year he sold 80,000 slips at $4.50 a thousand, and planted 76,000 slips in his own field of seven acres.

This made him a marked man, so to speak, and he was put in a program, with Williams taking it up and showing the way, is awaiting only enough plants to fill up about 40,000 acres in the County. This will include the sweet potato grown for feed purposes.

The 80,000 slips sold and the 76,000 slips put out in his own fields came from two potato beds. These are not to be confused with Chippendale or Louis XIV.

If you are interested in a potato bed, I can give you a quick idea. It, too, involves work. And a lot of it.

Potato beds are about 60 feet long and five feet wide. They are built on a grade. A deep trench of that size is dug. Iron bars cover it. For a distance of eight or 10 feet from the lower end of the bed, tin covers the bars. After that, wooden slabs will do.

On top of this, clay—that has never grown sweet potatoes—is packed in. It is 18 inches deep at the lower end, and thins out to eight inches. On top of this, two inches of virgin top soil is spread. Then the potatoes, which have been dipped in a spore-killing fluid, are placed in the bed, care being taken to see they do not touch. An inch and a half of top soil is placed over them. Then comes sawdust, three inches thick, which prevents baking and keeps the bed moist.

Then, at the lower end, a fire is built, and at the upper end wooden smokestacks serve to carry off smoke.

All you have to do, then, is to build a fire of green wood every morning and every night.

Potatoes are bedded down in mid-March, and the resulting slips are set out the last of April.

We went to one of the beds from which the thousands of slips had been gathered. The old potatoes were still in there, a few late slips making the bed green.

The potatoes, imbedded there since mid-March, were as firm as ever, without a single rotten spot, and could have been cooked and eaten.

It meant that Sidney Lowrey really had disease-free potatoes, and his slips in the field were disease-free.

Potatoes no longer are killed-dried. They are cured with high humidity, the idea being simply to form a corky layer under the skin which will protect the potato, keep it sweet, and prevent it from drying out.

Lowrey's children, Robert and Shirley, both have farm projects in 4-H Club work. Mrs. Lowrey, with a lot of pride, showed us the large freezing unit with meats and vegetables in plenty. REA has enabled her to have all the conveniences of city kitchens and homes.

They all work and—by work and by seeking and using information—they are already known as great assets in the County community.

The Chamber of Commerce is building a $7,000 potato-curing house for farmers who are sure to produce fine potatoes from disease-free plants. The canning plant also being built will can them commercially.

Dehydrated culls and jumbos will become stock feed. Feed potatoes are a part of future plans.

Thus does a county initiate, and prove, and plan for a new crop and new income.

Next I want you to meet, in another "Report From the Country," Jimmy Green, Jr., who was driving a tractor at five, and some others, young and old, who are doing things worth while.

TRAFFIC DEATHS

Fulton County reduced its traffic fatalities by more than 50 percent during the first quarter of 1947.

Sgt. Preston Weeks, of the State Department of Public Safety, said Monday there were eight traffic fatalities for the given period this year compared with 18 for the same period last year.

DeKalb County showed an increase of seven deaths; Camden an increase of six deaths; Carroll an increase of three deaths; Richmond County an increase of one death, and Bibb County a decrease of three traffic deaths.

PETRILLO

federal government, as Ickes contended, and not to California.

In upholding the constitutionality of the Lea Act, the tribunal emphasized that it was passing at this time only on Petrillo's contention which was sustained recently by a federal district court in Chicago—that the law violated the first (free speech), the fifth (due process of law), and the thirteenth (involuntary servitude) amendments.

Associate Justice Black, who read the five-to-three majority decision, remanded the case to the Chicago court for trial on its merits and to determine whether specific applications of the law may violate the constitution.

The so-called anti-Petrillo act was aimed directly at his string of edicts forcing radio stations to maintain "standby" musicians on their payrolls.

The law prohibits coercion of a radio station to hire more musicians than the management considers necessary.

Petrillo defied the law and the Government haled him into the court at Chicago where Federal Judge Walter J. La Buy declared the law unconstitutional and dismissed the case.

In reversing La Buy's decision, Black threw out Petrillo's contention that the Lea Act was "class legislation" because it "singles out broadcasting employees for regulation while leaving other classes of employees free to engage in the very practices (featherbedding) forbidden to radio workers."

The court agreed to decide the validity of real estate owners' agreements aimed at excluding Negroes from certain residential neighborhoods. The suits involved Negro couples from Detroit and St. Louis. Both families bought property in "white" neighborhoods and white property owners brought suit to oust them.

Skin Cracks, Gets Red, Burns

HERE IS A SOOTHING AND EFFECTIVE TREATMENT for ATHLETE'S FOOT

1—Neurabalm acts promptly to relieve excruciating pain... itching. 2—It kills all FIVE of the Fungi which usually cause Athlete's Foot on contact. 3—It dissolves the hot, excessive perspiration on which Athlete's Foot Fungi grow and thrive. 4—It promotes healing of raw, cracked, peeling or soggy skin between toes and on the feet.

The reason Neurabalm is so effective in relieving Athlete's Foot is that it gets at the seat of the trouble by killing all FIVE of the common fungi on contact! These highly infectious plant molds and parasites grow and thrive on hot, perspiring feet. So here, too, Neurabalm is effective in helping keep down excessive perspiration. Further, its soothing, analgesic ingredients work FAST to relieve pain and itching.

Helps Guard Against Re-Infection
Treat your feet to a rub with Neurabalm to kill these fungi and to help prevent a painful and tedious case from developing. Neurabalm is delightful to use! It leaves the skin clean and refreshed; it is greaseless, non-sticky... does not stain the skin... blisters... nor destroy tissue. Suits Against School Board To Continue Today

DeKalb Superior Court Judge Frank Guess Monday postponed until 10 a. m. today hearings which began Saturday in two suits brought by Henry E. Nelson to regain superintendency of DeKalb County Schools.

The hearings, originally scheduled to be resumed Monday, were delayed another day at the request of attorneys for Nelson and for the Board of Education, against whom the suits are directed.

When the hearings are resumed today, court attaches said, attorneys for the Board of Education will continue demurrer arguments in a mandamus action against the Board of Education. In this action Nelson asked the court to mandamus the Board to recognize him as Superintendent.

Following this, hearing of a quo warranto proceeding against Dr. Sam Guy, Nelson's successor, will be started. Nelson has asked that the incumbent show cause why he should not be deposed.

WALKOUT

The Birmingham work stoppage was not expected to have an immediate reaction on the coal supply there since the steel companies do other consumers have been building up backlogs of coal in anticipation of the miners' scheduled holiday.

There appeared little likelihood that action would be instituted against a coal walkout unless it reached proportions which would endanger the public health and safety. In that event, much would depend on the action of President Truman.

There was a wide divergence of opinion on just how effective the law would be if a "no contract, no work" strike is called by UMW Pres. John L. Lewis when the miners end their 10-day vacation on July 7.

Observers at Birmingham said the miners there apparently had a well-organized walkout plan. William Mitch, the local UMW President, was in conference with Southern coal operators on proposed mine safety legislation when the walkouts began. Day shifts at the affected mines finished their work day, but the night shifts reported and then went home.

VETO

became reconciled to it. Philip Murray, President of the CIO, called a meeting of its executive board for Friday to map its course.

Just as quickly, Gerhard P. Van Arkel, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, resigned. He expressed "grave doubts concerning both the workability and the fairness" of the act. The law creates a new post of general counsel with broader duties and $12,000 salary compared with the present $9,975, but Van Arkel said he does not want it.

That chamber had voted to over-ride the veto on Friday, as soon as it was delivered, by 331 to 83, nearly 4 to 1.

So the Taft-Hartley Act of 1947 took its place in the law books beside the Wagner Act of 1935 and a new era of labor-management relations in America was born.

The new law bans the closed shop, under which non-unionists may not be hired, but permits the union shop with certain restrictions. In a union shop, non-unionists may be hired but then must join up.

It also imposes a long string of restrictions on union activities which have sprung up under the Wagner Act.

The first thing, now will be for the President to appoint two members to the three-man National Labor Relations Board, which will administer some sections of the Taft-Hartley Act along with the Wagner Act. He also must name a new general counsel for the board who will take over some of the functions the board itself now has.

These appointments must be confirmed by the Senate.

The Senate and House, too, have appointments to make—to a 14-member joint committee which is to study the whole field of industrial relations with an eye to further legislation if necessary. The committee also is expected to act as the "watchdog" of Congress in the work of the Taft-Hartley Act. Sen. Ball, Republican, Minnesota, is reported the choice of Senate Republicans to head it.

Soon, also, might come a big test of the provision designed to cope with nation-wide strikes affecting public health or safety. It could come with a soft coal walkout which seems likely to occur next month because the seized mines to private hands June 30 and the operators and John L. Lewis have no contract.

The new law provides that the government may seek an injunction to block a big strike for 80 days. During that time an inquiry board would get busy, and the NLRB would hold a secret ballot election among the strikers to see whether they wanted to accept the employers' last offer despite its rejection by their leaders.

A dozen Senators were summoned to a White House luncheon and conference Friday by the President in the hope that the Senate might stop the overriding action. An expert Democratic Leader Barkley and Sen. Sparkman, Democrat, Alabama, voted Monday to override the veto.

The President's parley with the Senators drew criticism on the House floor today from Rep. I. Arends, Illinois, the Republican whip. He raised a question whether it constituted lobbying under terms of the act which requires lobbyists to register.

Arends reported that labor organizations spent $1,000,000 in their campaign against the bill.

casual and non-inquisitive friendship with the American underworld figure, she was dabbling at her eyes from which tears were dropping. Virginia, who might be called the smouldering type, was wearing a low-necked silk dress and silver, heeled slippers.

She heard about Siegel's death while spending the weekend with the family of a 21-year-old Frenchman who has been "awfully nice" to her.

"I can't believe he is dead," she said with a sniffle, as she sat in the rich living room of her hotel suite overlooking the Rue de la Paix.

"Ben—that's what I always called him—was so nice and he had lots of friends. I can't imagine who shot him or why they wanted to do it."

"The last I saw of Ben was three weeks ago at his brand-new gambling casino, the Flamingo, in Las Vegas. He was working hard and I told him he could not come to dinner with all those nice people we were going to eat with in a dirty sports shirt. 'It won't look nice,' I told him. He barked back that I should mind my own business. I am not taking that from anyone, so I packed my things and left."

"I phoned good-bye from Chicago last week and said I was going to Europe. He said good-bye and I never heard from him afterward."

She stopped at this point to wipe her eyes, and explained in a stronger voice that she had come over for three months "to look at Europe." She came alone, but young Nicholas Feuille, son of a wealthy French family, was "being awfully nice to me."

"There's nothing more than that to our relationship," Virginia said. "We are just good friends."

"Why, I was with his family—they are awfully nice—all weekend on their houseboat in the Seine near Fontainebleau and I slept in the same room with Nick's mother."

She sighed and returned to Ben's story. "I never was very friendly with Ben either," she said. "I never went with his friends and he did not know who my friends were. There was no mistress business involved. If anyone asked questions, I never said anything. I was just his mistress. It was that Las Vegas hotel. He was killing himself putting it in shape."

"I never knew Ben was involved in all that gang stuff. He never mentioned anything about it and I never ask any questions. I never saw him work before he got started on the Flamingo. He used to live in Beverly Hills and he spent his time exercising at Terry Hunt's gym or at the barber shop. But about a year ago, shortly after he divorced his wife, he got the idea for this hotel in Las Vegas and he didn't stop working since."

"It was at the hotel where I saw Ben three weeks ago. And now this has happened. It's awful. I don't know if I want to go back there. It doesn't seem real. You know, when you've had lots of happy times in a place, it's no fun to be sad. I think when I come back from Europe, I will go to Miami where I have a house."

"I learned about this whole affair in the papers last weekend. I was stunned. The papers called Ben 'Bugsy.' I don't know where that name came from. Maybe one of his business friends gave it to him. They all have nicknames."

She rubbed her silver slippers together impatiently and concluded: "I see that the shooting took place in my house. It wasn't mine, but a friend of mine lent it to me. I guess Ben must have been in the library, which has two big windows looking out on the driveway. The house is a big one sitting back from the road and the library was the easiest place to get to."

"I have a transatlantic call in to my brother who was living in the house at the time. I have to go find out what happened. It's all too terrible."

country vehicles." He indicated these automobiles should be capable of transporting military, civilian and commerce and should be of such rugged construction they would travel any road Army vehicles would be expected to traverse.

As another step in the wide-spread preparedness program, Gen. Hughes said he had urged industry to go underground. He said this meant key industries which would be called upon to manufacture war implements, food and clothing for the military.

"We will not be an ostrich with our head stuck under the ground," the General said. "Time will be the most important element in the next war. In the past we have fought instant wars. We have taken a year or two to get ready. Next time, we must be ready when it happens."

Gen. Hughes indicated the attack would be on the United States, placing this country in the same position England occupied during World War II. He pointed out that military personnel in England was in a much safer position than the civilians who had to undergo the horrors of the V-weapons hurled at them by Germany.

He declined to say where the attackers would base their aircraft or guided missiles.

Gen. Hughes minimized the need for a large standing army when he said the Ordnance Department has "enough men to do the job which lies ahead." He said men are constantly being trained to repair and operate all types of vehicles under a training program similar to the one now being carried out at the Atlanta Ordnance Depot.

Radical changes in automobiles of the future were forecast by the oft-decorated veteran of more than three years in the European and African theaters of war. He said he expected the automobile manufacturers to employ many of the Army's recommendations for cross-country stamina, universal type engines and other improvements during the next five years.

THE NEW LABOR LAW

Federal Court Power Stronger Than Ever

This is the first of six stories explaining the highlights of the new labor law. It tells who's affected, when, and how.

By MAX HALL

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—Now this country has a new labor law. And now begins a long struggle between unions and employers over how the law shall be applied.

Under this new law labor and management can haul each other before the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB)—which administers the act—with charges of committing "unfair labor practices."

Decisions of the board can be enforced now by Federal Courts which can use injunctions—court orders—to stop "unfair labor practices."

So the Federal Courts become more important in labor-management relations than ever before.

For that reason lawyers and law students are expected to start specializing in the labor field.

Here are some other ways in which cases can get into the Federal Courts under the new law:

1. Previous limitations on damages suits have been lifted to make it easier for unions to sue, and be sued, for contract violations. Example:

A union and an employer have a contract which forbids strikes under certain conditions. The union calls a strike. The employer sues the union for damages. The union goes to court and sues for damages.

IN GAY PAREE—Marita Farell, left, lovely Met soprano who sang here in "The Marriage of Figaro" last Spring, joins in a duet with her hero, Edward Roecker, as Eleanor Lutton, soprano supporting player, turns her back in jealous envy. in intrastate commerce—hotels, laundries, department stores and the like.

Here is one of the interesting questions which the board will have to solve:

Does the new law apply to the many AFL building trades unions in the construction industry?

The previous big labor law, the Wagner Act, was passed in 1935. The NLRB had to administer that act.

In doing so, it ruled that most of the construction industry did not come under the Wagner Act, the federal law.

So the construction industry's problems with unions fell mostly under state laws.

But will the NLRB, under the new law, change its ruling and decide the construction industry comes under federal law? An interstate angle can be found in nearly every large construction job.

The closed shop (where no one but a union member can work) and jurisdictional strikes occur widely in the construction industry.

The new law changes even the board itself, making it larger. The new, larger board succeeds the old one 60 days from the day on which the Senate over-rode the Presidential veto.

Judging by past experience the NLRB will exempt from the new law—and continue to consider as

FARELL SINGS WAY TO HEARTS AGAIN

Broadway, Met Stars at Opera

By PAUL JONES

The peanuts 'n' popcorn opera made more picturesque the unusual large settings.

The Atlanta audience have taken into their hearts another of the principals. She's Patricia Bowman, ballerina of the company, who Monday night encouraged waves of laughter with her sprightly "Chit Chat Polka," which she interpreted with the aid of Comedians Edmund (Fat Man) Dorsey and Alex Rotov.

Miss Bowman was the "scene stealer" of "Naughty Marietta" also.

"Vagabond" brims over with good music. The duets, "Love Me Tonight" and "Only a Rose" give the romantic leads something real to sing about. Miss Farell's solo, "Home Day," and Roecker's aria, "The World Is Mine Tonight," are show-stoppers, both.

The rousing, "Song of the Vagabonds," which is done by the entire ensemble, is another of the score's beautiful melodies.

This play is done in four acts, with three scenes. It opens on a tavern in Paris, switches to the garden of King Louis XI, and the final number, a square in Old Paris.

"Vagabond King" will be presented each night through Sunday of this week.

Marita Farell, beautiful Czechoslovakian soprano star of the Met, who appeared here in "The Marriage of Figaro" earlier in the season, sang her way into the hearts of everyone in the vast outdoor theater with a delightful interpretation of the Lady Katherine De Vauzelles. And her leading man, Edward C. Roecker, gave the women's hearts a tumble with his dramatic rendition of the romantic Francois Villon.

Without minimizing the initial effort, Friml's beautiful play exceeded in every respect the Moonlight Opera Company's "Naughty Marietta." The costumes were gayer, the songs more lilting and the stars sang with robust enthusiasm and feminine charm.

The settings were typical of the type backdrops used in Broadway shows and the lighting effects, created by the maze of colored lamps,

The Labor Bill Becomes Law

The Labor Bill now is law. The Senate of the United States yesterday made it so by substantially overriding the veto of President Harry S. Truman on Friday last.

The law is not perfect. It will be, almost immediately, subjected to test by strike and court action. Some provisions of it do not become effective for 60 days. It is possible certain parts are, as claimed by its opponents, unconstitutional.

Yet, here again it must be pointed out that Labor generally failed to live up to its responsibilities in making it a better bill.

There was not, so far as we know, a single leader in the field of Labor who did not admit, at least privately, that legislation was needed to correct certain injustices. Yet the course taken by organized Labor was one of complete opposition to any and all provisions of the bill without so much as a recommendation of legislation designed to correct admitted abuses.

Had The Atlanta Constitution believed it to be the repressive bill as claimed by Mr. Truman and its other foes, we would not have suggested it be signed. Our position was exactly that of Sens. Hatch and Fulbright, old friends of the President and long held up by organized Labor as fair-minded men, friendly to Labor. They both said that in the absence of any other legislation, this bill, weak though it be, is better than none and can be corrected by amendment.

There is nothing in the bill that takes from Labor its right to strike. There is only one feature of the bill that approaches such a restriction. This is in the basic industries, where a strike would bring about a national calamity. There the only restriction is for a waiting, or cooling-off period, of 80 days. This will not seem severe in disputes involving the national welfare.

If there are "jokers" or "hidden dangers," as claimed, they surely will be revealed and removed.

The bill requires compulsory bargaining from both sides, not just one. It lists unfair practices by employers and unions. It ends the practice of having the National Labor Relations Board serve at once as investigator, prosecutor, judge and jury.

We believe that it will, once the initial fury and angry resistance has cooled, bring about stability in industrial relations.

For these reasons we support it and believe it will be found workable.

Also, there was no mistaking the fact that Labor legislation was desired by the majority of the American people.

We trust that the attitude of all will be that it is the law of the land and that any attack upon it must come through legal channels and not through actions which thoughtlessly flout the law.

The League of Women Voters

The Atlanta Constitution long has supported and promoted the League of Women Voters as a valuable adjunct to State and local government.

It is the only organization studying the needs and the failures of government from a nonpartisan viewpoint. There is no other organization which applies the yard stick of close examination and thorough investigation of candidates and issues as does this one composed of interested, patriotic women.

Their annual Citizens' Institute, recently concluded at the Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville, was productive of a fine and valuable discussion of Georgia problems.

We urge upon every woman in Georgia who is interested in the problems of government that she join the local organization if there be one. If there is not one, we suggest that each community find how it may organize a chapter affiliated with the State organization.

Evans' Liquor Election

While it is not within The Constitution's province to lend its voice in support of one side or another in strictly local affairs outside Atlanta, the comment of Editor Frank O. Miller, of the Pembroke Journal, concerning a forthcoming liquor referendum in neighboring Evans County is, we believe, especially interesting.

Said Editor Miller: "We remember when Claxton was 'dry,' in so far as licensing anyone to sell liquor was concerned, but when it was possible to buy more corn liquor at the filling station than you could buy gas or oil. In fact, it was displayed on the shelf so that one and all could see it.

"Today, with sugar off the ration list, it is easier for the illicit liquor people to get materials to make moonshine liquor with, there will be no shortage of the homemade variety, even if they do limit the sale of legal liquor.

"Dublin, in Laurens County, is located in a dry county, but if you have the cash you can buy more liquor there than you can in most places. Millen is in a dry county, yet there is no shortage of liquor. All you have to have is the cash and a willing mind to part with it to be able to buy all the liquor you want in any 'dry' county.

"It does away with the money received for licensing them to do business, which in Evans amounts to about $14,000, according to reports, each year, and turns them loose to sell as much as they want, to whom they want and pay nothing for it.

"It might be that the 'officials' could call around ever so often and make a case of selling liquor and shake the boys down for a small fine, but that does not help relieve the taxpayers any."

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

Here To Stay

Editor Constitution: Law is a rule laid down by the governed, and as such commands performance of duties. But no law rises higher than the people. Whenever in America, laws have been too far, it was the law that suffered, just as it did in the Volstead Act which created a hot-bed of law violators.

In the end we must accept one glaring fact: Labor unions are here to stay, whether we like it or not. And whatever our private thoughts are on the matter we are going to have to get along with them, if the nation is to prosper. We can fight them and curse them, but we know deep down that this attitude is not going to accomplish any constructive results. R. N. HOLT, Lawrenceville.

Aeronautical Peace?

Editor Constitution: Marching four abreast, it would take three years for all the dead boys of "World War II" to march by. World War III would kill boys and babies, too, and stop all incomes. High hopes and fair promises must give way to cold facts and actualities. Our Government has nothing to offer America but a bloody war with Russia. America has all to lose and Russia has all to gain.

The world moves on, air-age peace caught eleven-hour patriots empty-headed. Our boys won World War II but our Government has lost the peace! No boy and no income is on solid ground today. What good is a government, if it fails us when we need it? This is the air-age, we keep pace with progress or we perish. Nothing but a sound aeronautical peace can stop Russia and save America. CHARLES S. WOODRUFF, Louisville, Ky.

The Constitution welcomes letters on either side of any subject. They should not exceed 200 words and must be signed, although names will be withheld on request. We regret none can be returned.

Challenge

Editor Constitution: I have been reading, with much interest, your "Reports From the Country," and they are excellent. I think these reports from various sections of the country are interesting, enlightening and enjoyable. They, also, are a challenge from sections that are doing well to those that are not; consequently, will be most helpful. JOHN T. PHILLIPS, Albany.

Confused

Editor Constitution: During his short career as Fulton Police Chief, G. Neal Ellis has unearthed certain information, not exactly pertinent, concerning the Refoule murder case. Frankly, one must be a bit confused and not altogether easy in one's own mind. But Mr. Ellis is to be congratulated upon an important discovery, i. e., a young woman who can keep a secret for a whole year and seven months.

In this topsy-turvy world it is difficult to find a mentor to instruct one on matters of simple daily living . . . for instance, the difference between man and woman.

Without doubt, the members of the Grand Jury were chosen for their degree of sophistication as well as piety, and we are grateful to them and to Mr. Ellis for their ability to draw the line defining just where Sodom begins and Gomorrah leaves off. ADELAIDE R. GRIEVE, Atlanta.

Patients and Recreation

Editor Constitution: I have just read the letter you published which was written by George Williams in which he stated his reasons for the removal of Finney General Hospital from Thomasville. His chief objection to Thomasville was the lack of recreational facilities.

I will not attempt to answer his objections, neither will I attempt to sustain them. However, here is a point I should like to make at this time. Why is it necessary for the removal of the hospital to be considered in the location of a hospital? If a person is sick enough, either physically or mentally, to be in a hospital, there he should remain until discharged by the hospital. If the patient was paying his own hospital expenses you can be sure he would not stay in the hospital any longer than actually necessary, but as long as the stay is at the expense of the Veterans' Administration, it appears that the recreational facilities outside of the hospital must be considered.

During the recent war I had occasion to observe first hand the effect on patients who were permitted the use of recreational facilities other than those provided by hospitals, and I can recall very few cases where, in my opinion, this proved of benefit to the patient. W. K. MCCOLLUM, Quitman.

'Splendid Work'

Editor Constitution: Every citizen of Georgia is indebted to you for the series of splendid articles you are writing on rural conditions in Georgia. It is amazing what has been and is being done, as revealed by you. Please keep up this splendid work. JOHN A. BOYKIN, Atlanta.

A Crystal Ball For Pros and Amateurs

Who will get the "Roosevelt vote?" Is there really such a vote to be cast? What will be the strategy of the two parties? With 1948 and the national campaign coming up, with the labor issue not merely sharply, but bitterly drawn, the questions become inevitable.

Politicians, amateur and professional, who seek to peer into the future far as human eye can see, and further if possible, will do well to purchase "They Voted for Roosevelt" (Sanford University Press, $3), by Dr. Edgar Eugene Robinson, Professor of History at that university.

The South's peculiar position in national politics, of which all of us are aware, again is brought sharply into focus by this analysis. Dr. Robinson reaches a conclusion which seems largely sound. The position is that never in any one of the four Roosevelt victories did the majority vote for an individual named Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Millions of persons did vote for the man Roosevelt, and would have voted for the man Roosevelt any time he offered as a candidate, but argues Dr. Robinson.

In the period of 12 years as leader, Mr. Roosevelt was not one man with one program, but several men with several programs. . . . Whereas his leadership at times appealed to reformers, to radicals, to labor leaders, to businessmen, to "internationalists," rarely did it appeal to all of them. At no time did it have a particular appeal to the leaders in the area from which he was seen to draw basic Democratic support, that is, the South.

Without the certainty of Southern support, Mr. Roosevelt's speeches, programs, actions and methods of procedure in office must have been very different, for in the nation outside the South he was a minority leader with a temporary majority.

The South Dr. Robinson errs, insofar as the South is concerned, by at least two years. Certain it is that Roosevelt had a very particular appeal to Southern leaders in the first two years of the original term. He held most of them well past 1936.

There had appeared, by that time, some Southern leaders who openly opposed the then President. One of them was the late Eugene Talmadge who, because of that opposition, lost almost every county in Georgia in a campaign for the United States Senate on what was, basically, a platform pledged to change the Roosevelt policy. In other Southern States a few political leaders also became anti-Roosevelt. But it was, as Jim Farley points out in his current articles, "Why I Broke With Roosevelt," the purge attempts of 1933 which first consolidated a Southern bloc.

Patronage Despite the fact the figures show the South to have received a small percentage of Federal spending during the Roosevelt administrations, the fact was that it was so much more than the South had ever had before that the benefits were tremendous. The tangible benefits still exist, and will remain in school buildings, community centers, roads, bridges, county buildings of all kinds, parks and recreation centers, including 4-H camps and improved health through added expenditures and clinics growing out of this extra money. There were many homes and farms saved and hundreds of good farmers escaped from tenancy to become successful farm owners. There were many less tangible benefits.

The people knew all this. You cannot fool all the people all the time, and to this day the Roosevelt critics don't get anywhere "running down" Roosevelt. They may talk themselves blue in the face, but the people know better.

Outlook Dr. Robinson's survey makes it very clear, too, that the South need expect but little from the Republican party. He concludes that the Republicans, to win, must pitch their campaign to win electoral college majorities outside the South, in the East and West, in town and country.

He points out that the Republicans will not fail to see that 60 percent of the national vote is cast in three sections where the majority always has been traditionally Republican.

Handout Thus, the South will be left without any patronage benefits and very definitely will eat at the second table. In fact, the South very likely will not even be given a seat there, but will be handed a plate through the Republican kitchen window.

Writes Dr. Robinson: "Of course, no candidate in 1948 can obtain the total 'Roosevelt' vote. Not only was there no such vote, as we have seen, and thus it is an illusion, but Mr. Roosevelt will not be the candidate. . . . The alignment of special interests on both foreign and domestic questions will not in 1948 be clearly related to those of previous years.

But most of the anti-Roosevelt vote will be recorded against the Democratic candidate, whoever he may be, and this vote which has been in the minority for 12 years will be cast for the Republican candidate, whoever he may prove to be."

The only chance for the Democratic party is to hold the South and to pick up the time by industrial States where the labor vote is strong, and to capture the three or four Western States which have strong party organizations.

He concludes properly that there is no "national" vote, either Republican or Democratic, but that both parties will get support from groups which differ on many issues. That is evident from the analysis of county votes.

Dr. Robinson's book is the best political crystal ball I have seen, even if it does have a few flaws. And the South's political future looks cloudy, I am sorry to say.

'Stickativeness' An Important Word

Reading the paper one day last week, came upon an item which informed that two clubs, the Quota Club of Atlanta and the Atlanta Pilot Club have adopted resolutions urging the Atlanta and Fulton County governments to begin construction of a park plaza over the railroad tracks in downtown Atlanta.

Now I first came to Atlanta in 1912. It is my impression folks were talking about a park plaza over the railway gash at that time. Some day that dream will be reality. Perhaps I won't be here to see it. I have hopes, however, my children will. Certainly, my grandchildren.

"Stickativeness" is, obviously, a manufactured word. You won't find it in the dictionary. Yet I have known it all my life. My dad used it when I was a very young boy. Trying, I suppose, to instill what he considered a desirable quality in my young personality.

It means, as well as I can define it, a combination of two other qualities—patience and persistence—stuffed with determination. Setting a goal and keeping everlastingly at the job until you achieve it.

Pays Dividends Well, stickativeness pays dividends. Dividends of achievement—

Almost as far back as I can remember, city planners have talked of the desirability of eliminating the jog in the north-south street at Decatur Street and Central Avenue.

Well, we've been driving down the new, curving street, where the jog used to be, for about two months now.

When I came to Atlanta there were old steel cantilever bridges over the railroad tracks at Pryor, Broad and Forsyth Streets. People were saying how much better and safer it would be if we had modern viaducts at the Central Avenue and Pryor Street crossings.

It took years. The city had to get a special bill through the Legislature, permitting viaduct construction over the State-owned W. & A. tracks. After I don't know how many years of disappointment, the bill passed.

"The Healey Hole" The late William Healey, when I came to Atlanta, owned a vacant lot on Forsyth Street, facing the Old Post Office building. It was enclosed by a tight wooden fence seven or eight feet high, with a gate in it.

Healey, even at the time, dreamed of erecting a great office building, to bear his name and thus impress his memory on Atlanta after he was gone.

His real estate holdings made it necessary that he operate a number of one-man wagons, with Negro drivers. Whenever they had nothing else to do, these wagons would go to the vacant lot on Forsyth, pass through the gate and emerge loaded with red dirt. That was how the foundation excavating for the present Healey building began.

It took years, but the building, the memorial to William Healey, was ultimately built.

Some Day—The Plaza I think it was the late Haralson Blackley who drew the first plans I ever saw for the proposed downtown plaza.

Some day those plans will become reality.

The resolutions adopted by the Quota and the Pilot Clubs add their weight to the growing power of public insistence. Because of them, the plaza will be built a little sooner than otherwise.

Some day, too, Atlanta traffic reform will be realized. Some day there will be great traffic arteries crossing Atlanta at different levels.

Some day, even, Stone Mountain Memorial will be complete. How?

By stickativeness.

Divorce and Public Opinion

An article in the American Magazine, concerning the ever-increasing divorce evil, says divorces in one city outnumber marriages by three and one-half to one.

The explanation given by the author is an unprecedented breakdown in "the ability of our married couples to live congenially together."

If that is true, what caused it? Have our people changed? Does marriage fail because of poverty, or for want of children, or because of living in two-by-four apartments?

My own answer would be no. People haven't lost the ability to live together "congenially"; there has been no fundamental change in them, and marriage doesn't fail for any of the reasons given.

Divorce, like good or bad manners, heavy drinking, church-going, afternoon tea and other customs, is a community habit; it is approved or accepted by the public conscience, and encouraged by a low moral standard and ignorance of its evil consequences.

WHERE young people can marry at a moment's notice, prompted only by a few beers, or marry and obtain divorces five or six times a year, it is not true marriage but only legalized promiscuity. There is nothing to make it last.

But if it is a true partnership, sealed by a spirit of comradeship and a genuine love that almost invariably grows with the years, hardships affect it no more than they affect a mother's love for her child.

Married before I could vote, I was married for some months and then lived in meanly furnished apartments. We had to count nickels. But we were young; life was fun; slowly getting ahead was fun; and we were full of self-confidence and faith in the future.

Whether we were broke or prospering—whether we had one dollar or many dollars in the treasury—did not in any degree affect our opinion of ourselves or our loyalty to one another. And I believe that is true of all who are truly married.

In all the small towns with which I have been familiar, divorce always has been and still remains against the rules. In my boyhood home town, nearly all the kids I knew "paired off" in high school, married when they were old enough, or got through college, and are still living together unless death has parted them.

IN SMALL TOWNS—I mean villages of a few thousand—people don't violate the accepted standards of behavior. Divorce is usually taboo, and nobody gets a divorce except for some reason the public will approve. (Nobody seems meddling small-town gossip unless he has something to hide.)

There is but one way to end the senseless divorce evil quickly. First, mobilize public opinion against it, so that nobody who wishes to seem respectable will consider divorce unless driven to it. Second, teach a higher moral standard at home and in the schools. Third, teach school kids of the proper age, no matter what grade they are in, the decent way to have dates; the seriousness and sacredness of marriage; why Nature plans lifelong matings; and the evil done to the community, the parents and the children by broken homes.

In this matter, as in so many others, the chief cause is ignorance—and ignorance can be overcome by trying.

Now It's Atomic Diplomacy

Oldtime diplomacy was pretty much like painting the back fence. You were either reaching way over your head or bowing and scraping.

We tried that and got no further than a cone on a trestle bridge. Then we called four diplomats home and gave them sparring lessons.

You notice that Mr. Stalin shortened his neck when we gave him a bit of what-for. We not only told him where to get off but we also jerked the belpoise.

Back in the twitching twenties Europe described our brand of international intrigue as dollar diplomacy. We have thrown the switch on that. Although I'm not the fission candidate you can now peg it as atomic diplomacy.

Labor Battle Is Just Starting

WASHINGTON—The labor battle has by no means ended. The administration of any law is as important as its language. And when it comes to choosing administrators of the new labor law, any fool can foresee bitter disagreement between the President who prepared last week's powerful veto message, and the Senators who now seem determined to override that veto. The President will desire to appoint administrators sympathetic to the problems of organized labor. The Senators will be reluctant to confirm administrators suspected of any lack of sympathy with management. And thus the battle is likely to continue, perhaps with mounting force and bitterness.

Judging by the President's record on the labor issue to date, the Senate must be prepared to combat an unusual measure of quiet doggedness, persistency, and methodical determination in the White House. The stages by which the President reached his decision to veto the result of five months of Congressional travail may be said to cast a new light on his character and working habits.

As his first measure on the state of the Union was disclosed, Truman was aware from the first that the labor issue was immeasurably the most important domestic issue that would confront him during this session. In the period of his inexperience, he had a way of dealing with such issues without much careful preparation.

ON THIS OCCASION, however, he ordered his staff to commence a detailed analysis of the Hartley bill the day it was dropped into the hopper in the House, and to do the same for the Taft bill when it was offered in the Senate. These ridden, two additional members of the staff of the House and Senate continued to be chosen.

The bill moreover concentrates in the hands of the board's general counsel almost all but the board's strictly judicial powers. This official, who must also be named anew, will have the greatest single concentration of unchallenged authority over any sphere of American economic life of any man in the government.

Chairman Paul Herzog and the other present board members plan to stay on. They have indicated that although they dislike the new law, they will try to make it work. It is even understood that they plan to reorganize and perhaps to drop servants of the board like the director of the field division, Oscar S. Smith, who have aroused congressional hostility.

The President may also seek to conciliate Congress by naming men of the type of Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., as board members and re-nominating the able, notably fair-minded civil servant, Gerhard Van Arkel, as general counsel.

Yet the industrial community will want more than this. They will want men sympathetic to management, and ready to administer the law as management, not labor, would prefer. They will put the heat on Congress to this end. And the Congress may be expected to respond. The cry will go up that no one with the faintest tinge of "New Deal" association to the President from Secretaries of the Interior Julius A. Krug. The President's nominations will be attacked on this basis. And then the fat will be in the fire. Perhaps this kind of development can be averted, but it is hard to see how.

"Wallace threatens with Third Party"—News quote.

Some people never are content; no circumstance or great event.

Nor what they seek and sometimes find brings happiness or peace of mind—

And, lest some critics rise to say the great achievements of today,

The comforts, luxuries and such, on which we all depend so much,

Are ours because some men were not at all contented with their lot . . .

So far as we can ascertain a lot of that is all in vain.

Sometimes it seems the more we get the more we grumble, fume and fret.

And, to be absolutely frank, we don't know what's come over Hank;

He's had as much of quid pro quo as any person whom we know;

He has enjoyed the confidence of diplomats and presidents,

The laurel wreath has draped his brow and yet with all of this, somehow

He still pursues the phantom flame that beckons from the halls of fame.

Of all the things, from west to east, from north to south, we need the least,

Is one more branch of statesmanship; we need that like a fractured hip.

We can't agree with Henry, that the Democrats have left him flat—

They even took him for a ride and still he isn't satisfied.

HAROLD MARTIN

A Tough Station For Navy Wives

PANGO PANGO—The life of a Naval officer's wife on an isolated station such as this is not one that their Stateside sisters would envy.

At first it is not so bad, but soon the feeling of restriction, of confinement to this one little hunk of earth set in the midst of a trackless waste of sea begins to get them down. They get nervous and jittery and off their food and they are apt to be snappish with their husbands.

I have had a good chance to observe both the old-timers and the newcomers on this trip, for the station personnel was changing; a new Governor and his lady had come in and many of the younger officers and their wives were also new. (An old-timer on an island such as this, where the tour of duty is 18 months, is anybody who has been here for half a year). The newcomers think at first that they won't be able to stand it, a feeling which soon passes as they get into the swing of things, and the old-timers are those who have long since passed through that period of contentment and are beginning to feel that if they do not get away they will go nuts.

Servants They find, for the most part, comfortable houses, low, open to the winds and facing the sea. They find plenty of servants, at $20 a month, and most of them are good, though they do a better job at giving a big party than in the daily routine of keeping the house. There is a never-ending war on cockroaches that must be fought, and against mildew, which the Samoan does not carry on too well.

At first there is a great burst of gaiety. The Governor and his wife have everybody in to dinner, and then everybody has the Governor in. They dress, the men in whites and the ladies in long dresses, for every party attended by more than eight, and there is a party every night. Every Saturday night there is a dance at the club.

But pretty soon everybody has entertained everybody else. Polks begin to tire of each other. Cliques form, break up, and reform in different patterns. With no news from the outside world, every tiny happening becomes food for gossip. There is nothing new to do, nothing new to say, no zest left in life. Shopping, woman's great outlet for the vapors of Stateside, is no good, for the bush stores contain mostly canned meat, kerosene and cloth suitable for the fashioning of native lavalavas, or wrap-around skirts. And even when the beautiful prints come in, from England via Papeete, there's no dressmaker on the island capable of design more modern than the missionary Mother Hubbard. Some get too thin, some get too fat, and Stateside clothes begin to lose their fit.

Native Frolic To the fancier native ceremonies the whites are always invited too—to the elaborate wedding feasts where everybody squats cross-legged on the ground and picks politely at half-roasted pig, taro and breadfruit and sip pink and sweetish waters. But after a few of these, they too begin to pall.

In fact, that sense of being fed up is not confined to the Navy wife. That itching on my heel I fear is not the result of a mosquito bite. There's a plane leaving in the morning for Suva. I wonder if they'll have room for a passenger.

"Yep!—we're going to have a baby—how did you know, Joe?"

THOMAS L. STOKES

One Price Of Our Democracy

WASHINGTON—Republicans and others have made much of President Truman's failure to "co-operate" with Congress in his successive tax and labor bill vetoes.

There has been much quoting of the first paragraph of the President's public statement a few days after the November election, to wit:

"The people have elected a Republican majority in the Senate and the House of Representatives. Under our Constitution the Congress is the law-making body. The people have chosen to entrust the controlling voice in this branch of our Government to the Republican party. I accept their verdict in the spirit in which all good citizens accept the result of any fair election."

There the quotes stop. But Mr. Truman didn't. In the next sentence, he said: "At the same time and under the same Constitution, the duties and responsibilities of our Chief Executive and the executive branch of the Government are entrusted to me and my associates."

Space does not permit quoting all that followed, including his emphasis on the independence of the three branches of Government, recognition of the "serious difficulties" that divided control raised, stress on the necessity of wisdom and restraint to place the interests of country topmost, and his frank statement that issues inevitably would rise between the President and Congress. He said: "When this occurs, we must examine our respective positions with stern and critical analysis to exclude any attempt to tamper with the public interest to achieve personal or partisan advantage."

BUT NOWHERE has been quoted his final personal pledge:

"As President of the United States I am guided by a simple formula: To do in all cases, from day to day, without regard to narrow political considerations, what seems to me to be best for the welfare of all our people. Our search for that welfare must always be based upon a progressive concept of government."

"I shall co-operate in every

We Can't Stay Cynical

NEW YORK—One of our worst faults as a people is that we are unable to maintain our cynicism for more than a few hours at a time, consequently we are forever being taken dirty advantage of by men who play politics strictly according to the practical rules of the profession. They put us on warning time and again that they have neither ideals nor principles and that we have only ourselves to blame for disenchantments suffered when they run true to form. Yet we never do learn.

Although they make an effort to seem to be very bitter fellows, most of our political reporters, from the courthouse savants of the county seats to the meaty bores of the package-goods trade in Washington, and the boss unionizers "labor," likewise are just too dumb for this world. They try to remember never to trust anyone and to assume that the more winsome the politician the worse rogue he is. But then they adopt personal heroes, even deities, and devils, make fools of themselves and lead their unsuspecting readers into pitfalls paved with spikes and bottle-glass. A few repetitions of the terms, "straight-shooting" and "blunt-speaking," all clichés of the new and almost illiterate unionized school of newspapers and magazine journalism, and millions of gullibles, including misanthropic professors of political science in the colleges across the country, are convinced that some new congressman or bureaucrat embodies all the sterling virtues of which they have erroneously been led to believe both the Roosevelts, Theodore and Franklin, were compounded.

TO BE SURE, a few of this school of composition-writers are rascals themselves, trading their compliments for favors, such as exclusive tips on manufactured trifles of news or jobs for dependent relatives. But, though little else can be said in favor of the rest of them, the majority are just honestly unqualified for any higher responsibility than that of phoning in fires and traffic accidents. They not only report what they are told, but they believe it and bespeak belief among those who read the naive messages which they spell out with their blocks. It would be a comfort, rather than a belief, to believe that they were all sinister liars in a black conspiracy of secret forces to foist Henry Wallace on the people as a man of holy motives and honest heart.

The devil of it is, however, that from the late Ray Cline, who first gave us this idiotic estimate of a man as full of guile as Hitler and capable of inestimable furies once he were empowered, down to a wet-brain founding father of Alcoholics Anonymous, these people are sincere and the very clumsiness and raw-boned crudity of their essays are accepted as a Lincolnian virtue. People believe and trust them and are honestly effective deluded.

There are pathetic expressions of the innocence that I have in mind in some of the editorial remarks on President Truman's veto of the tax bill. Editors, on the whole, are more worldly than readers and certainly any Editor of experience knows that Mr. Truman's conduct here was not to be measured by such standards as sincerity or honesty or any other than political expedience. All his proffered reasons for the veto had been met and refuted in debate and it was just smart politics to put an arm around the $2,500 family and glare brave defiance at the half dozen Americans who are still foolish enough to accept $500,000 a year as income, taxable at 81 percent, instead of sluicing the same money to the same destination by the device called a capital gain.

TO POINT OUT that Truman challenged the constitutional obligation of Congress to lay taxes is to suggest a childish belief that he wasn't conscious of doing this and wouldn't have done it if he had been. We know, from our moments of clear, cynical intelligence that there is nothing that he wouldn't do for a political advantage, short of personal homicide, and of course all such robust vulgarities as may be left to his old friends of the Kansas City underworld. In this respect he is no worse than the late Roosevelt. Indeed, there is no difference except that Roosevelt had a more melodious knack of pietistical pretense which used to drive so many of us wild.

CELESTINE SIBLEY

The Mountains Double-Crossed Her

CLAYTON—To begin with, we never saw a mountain in our life till we were full grown. Or even a fair-sized hill. So how were we to know what to expect from a whole slew of North Georgia Mountains? Now, after a week of breathing the same air they breathe, of being neighbor to cliffs and crags and lofty peaks, it's a little hard to recapture the mood that sent us to the mountains. All we know is that we expected to keep our relations with them on a spiritual plane—and here it's become as physical as bubble bath or appendicitis.

The way we planned it, we were to keep our distance from the mountains—sit at a window and contemplate their beauty, derive inspiration and mental stimulation from just being near them. We heard there was something therapeutic about mountain air and we fully expected our fleshly needs and cares to drop from us like brown blossoms from the rhododendron.

WELL, the mountains hereabouts have certainly double-crossed us. They have made us a slave to creature comforts. We meant to live on pure air and poetic thoughts now live from a song the day would never end mealtime to mealtime. We who meant to keep our distance from the mountains have been stumbling up rocky passes, lapping up views of sleek cows in green pastures, breathing deep of the fragrance of bay blossoms and pine needles, listening to clear little streams pelting over mossy stones . . . all in a thoroughly sensual fashion.

Last week we could take food or dine on cheese crackers and milk at our desk. This week when Mrs. Bynum rings that big bell outside the kitchen door to notify her scattered guests it's mealtime, we lash ourself to the foot of the bed to keep from getting to the dining room before the echo has died. When a decent interval of 10 or 12 seconds has passed we plunge down the stairs like a thing possessed, bruising a few elderly ladies in the process, breaking a few brittle bones from Charleston in our rush.

The first day we were here we admired the daisies and larkspur and Queen Anne's lace set around the dining room in little jugs and pitchers. We made a respectable past or two at the view from the dining room window. Now we just eat and eat and eat and eat.

COUNTRY CURED ham with red gravy . . . hot biscuits with fresh churned butter . . . blueberry muffins . . . cherry cobbler wearing a halo of sugar and butter sauce . . . broiled chicken . . . fried chicken . . . June peas so fresh out of the garden they still taste of sunshine . . . new potatoes slathered with butter and cream . . . cucumbers and dark green lettuce picked this morning . . . mustard greens and baked potatoes with chunks of butter in their meaty hearts . . . pitchers of thick yellow cream . . . dishes of rhubarb, of amber apple jelly, of amethyst and ruby . . . pickled crabapples to go with the ham . . . split pea soup with a crest of unsweetened whipped cream . . . all the butter-milk, all the coffee you can drink . . . tall beakers of iced tea . . . coconut custard and blueberry succubers adrift in a cloud of whipped cream.

Between lifting your fork and shooting away the waitress with the basket of more hot bread, you use up your strength fast in the dining room. In fact, after lunch you have barely enough stamina left to totter upstairs for a nap.

In the evening we may get as far as the fireplace. We have been known to walk around the yard a little. Dew falls early up here and

CHANNING COPE

The Personality Of a Farm Home

Awakening early this morning and heading promptly for the kitchen we were confronted through the window with a sizable list of friends and guests already assembled in the back yard. It was hardly light but the back yard contingent was there and ready.

Included in the gathering were Dinty (the cat), and her four kittens, Goose and Ghandi (the geese), Lee and Beagle, and two big hens of the New Hampshire breed. And quite a number of birds. There was one other personality present: old Will Johnson, who was dusting the garden plants with Sabadilla, but he was not a volunteer and will not be included in our discussion this morning.

There is something about a home, and especially a farm home, that attracts all manner of creatures. Maybe this is what Edgar Guest meant by his saying that "it takes a lot of living in a house to make it home."

AT ANY RATE there is accumulated as time goes on a whole contingent of friends and associates who take up with the place and form part of its personality. They "go" with the place. Think back over our backyard contingent at Yellow River it is recalled that Dinty was given us by our neighbor, Dinty Moore. We someone would go out and chase have had cats before and since, but Dinty fits into the routine and there she remains. Lee came to us along with his sister, Queenie, from a friend named Mosely up at Tugalo, in North Georgia. Queenie didn't fit here and is now a popular resident of Law-ling!

Home is the place where all of us living things merge into some us along with his sister, Queenie, thing of a composite personality. The more diversified the inhabitants, the more interesting the personality. May it ever keep growing a popular resident of Law-ling!

3 Brothers Held Here After Still-Slaying Hunt

Three Negro brothers, suspects in connection with the June 17 killing of U. S. Revenue Agent Melvin John Clark, were jailed in Fulton County Monday in default of bonds totaling $15,000, following their arrest in Banks County and arraignment before U. S. Commissioner Frank A. Holden on a technical charge of illegal distilling. The trio was captured early Monday only a few miles from the spot where Clark was felled by a fusillade of bullets as he prepared to raid a hidden liquor still near

U.S. Farm Relies Still on Old HP

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—This may be the atomic age, but Old Dobbin and the mule are still the big source of working power on the farm. The Census Bureau reported Monday that almost two-thirds of all farms entered the postwar period depending wholly or partly on horses and mules for power.

Of the remaining farms, fewer than one in 10 use tractors exclusively. Farms in the North and East had the highest proportion of tractors, those in the South the lowest. The Bureau's report was based on an analysis of its latest (1945) farm census.

Solon Hits Savannah River Dam

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—Rep. Wilson, Republican, Indiana, foe of the proposed $46,000,000 Clark's Hill dam on the Savannah River, promised Monday "I will do everything I can on the floor" of the House to block further appropriation for the power and flood control project. Wilson, who is Chairman of a House Public Works sub-committee, and author of legislation to cancel Congressional authorization for construction of the dam, made his statement when the Savannah River Electric Company and a group of Georgia County officials urged a halt to the project. Charles A. Collier, Vice President of the Power Company, criticized a provision in the 1944 authorization giving "public bodies and co-operatives" preference in buying power to be generated at the dam. Collier said his company was "ready, willing and able" to construct the dam across the Savannah River if authorized to do so. Collier told the Sub-Committee the Savannah River Electric Company had been granted a permit to build the dam in 1928, but had surrendered it in the depression year of 1932. Meanwhile, he continued, the Company had acquired $2,000,000 worth of lands in the reservoir area and is ready to construct the dam. Congress has appropriated $5,500,000 for construction work on the dam, and is considering further allotment this year. "There is no excuse for further development by the Federal Government," Collier declared. "It just cannot be justified. 'This is not a flood control project. It's nothing but a power project.'"

Welcome to "MAN O' WAR"

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA'S BEAUTIFUL, NEW STAINLESS STEEL TRAIN INAUGURATES STREAMLINER SERVICE BETWEEN ATLANTA AND COLUMBUS

The Budd Company, builder of "Man o' War", offers congratulations to the Central of Georgia on the introduction of its new and wonderfully luxurious train.

This gleaming train consists of the most modern, stainless steel cars, hauled by a giant Diesel locomotive.

All the cars are air conditioned and illuminated by restful, fluorescent light. And their wide, panorama windows are tinted to control the glare of the sun.

The first car is a combination baggage car and reclining chair coach. Following are other coaches. All the seats are the luxurious, adjustable chair type, exactly like the ones in famous, long-distance trains. And your own seat is reserved for you.

The last car is something to dream about. Its forward end is a tavern, with gay decorations, a beautiful horseshoe-shaped snack-bar, and tables seating thirty-six people, where you can enjoy excellent food and beverages, or a sociable game of cards.

The rear end of the car is an observation lounge with richly upholstered club chairs, deep-piled rug, white leather sofas, white and gold drapes.

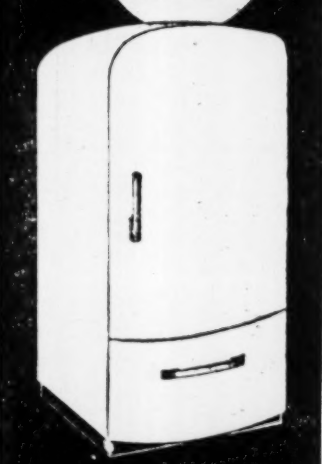

Today, Central of Georgia's "Man o' War" joins the distinguished company of Budd-built stainless steel trains which are bringing railway travel to new heights of comfort, safety and dependability.

USES BOY AS SHIELD

27 Cops Held at Bay
By Boston Youth, 15

BOSTON, June 23—(UP)—Using another boy as a human shield, a 15-year-old youth who weighs only 97 pounds held 27 policemen at bay for a quarter of an hour Monday and wounded one of them as he fired five shots from a revolver before being overpowered.

Edward Bancroft, of Roxbury, wearing clothes similar to those worn by a holdup-suspect for whom the police were searching, was stopped on the street for questioning by two patrolmen in a cruise car.

Though later developments proved he was not implicated in the holdup, Bancroft drew a revolver from his pocket, shot Patrolman James Bray through the left arm, and then dashed into an alley where he collared 15-year-old William Rowan and held the boy in front of him as he prepared to shoot it out with police.

Twenty-five police reinforcements were called. They were unable to get close to Bancroft who stood with his back to a fence in the dead-end of the alley. They pleaded with him to surrender, but he answered each appeal with ineffectual shots that ricocheted off the side of a house out into the street.

Finally, Police Officer George Toland circled the block and crept along the fence behind the gun-toting youth. When he was directly behind Bancroft he rose up, leaped over the fence, and slugged the boy on the head with the butt of a riot gun.

Just as the officer struck Bancroft, Rowan whirled and knocked the revolver from the boy's hand. At Police Headquarters, Bancroft maintained a stoic silence, refusing to answer questions or explain why he had started the gun duel. He refused to tell where he had acquired the revolver.

"Don't crowd me," was all he'd say to police. "I don't care about anything else, but just keep away from me—don't crowd."

Court records showed that Bancroft was under a suspended reformatory sentence for a breaking and entering conviction in 1945. He was arrested last year in connection with a sex offense, but was sent to a psychopathic hospital and later released. In 1942 he was arrested in connection with a larceny charge, but was turned over to the State's Child Welfare Society.

Gas Company's
Ad Wins Award

Officials of the Atlanta Gas Light Company have proudly announced receipt of a national award to the Company by the Public Utilities Advertising Association for an advertisement which appeared in The Constitution commemorating the Company's 90th anniversary.

The display, featuring the famed "Blue Flame" insignia in color, won a better copy contest of the Public Utilities Advertising Association which ran from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1946, and the award was made last week at a meeting in Detroit. It is the oldest such contest in the nation open to all public utilities companies.

Still another ad, featuring the "House of the Blue Flame," won honorable mention in another contest sponsored by the Association. It was this same ad which earlier won the national award from McCall Magazine.

SCHOOLBOY USED AS SHIELD—A youth whom police identified as Edward Bancroft, 15, holds a revolver against a schoolboy, William Rowan, 15, as a shield during a gun fight with police in Boston Monday. Police said Bancroft started to fire when officers questioned him about a robbery, and the boy ran to a schoolyard and grabbed Rowan for protection. An officer was injured.

Frances Sees Berry Schools,
And a Dream Takes Shape

MOUNT BERRY, June 23—Observation of the clearcut, industrious program at Berry Schools Monday highly impressed Frances Davis, 15, daughter of Mrs. S. H. Davis, of Snellville, after a tour of the institution accompanied by five other high school pupils.

Frances has been dreaming that she may be allowed to come to Berry for college training after she finishes high school in Snellville next year. Monday she got her first glimpse of the spacious institution which Martha Berry founded for boys and girls who are willing to work their way through college. Now she knows for certain that Berry is the right place for her.

With five other Georgia high school students on a state tour as guests of the Georgia Power Company, Frances went over the school grounds and past buildings built from blocks made by students who have learned what toil and earnestness can do. Although this is vacation time, she saw cheerful students at work in the fields, on the roadway, and in the kitchen. They were young people working through the summer months to pay their tuition next fall, earning the right to be at Berry. That kind of spirit, Frances agreed, carried the promise of good citizenship, later on to

A voice we loved is still.
A place in vacant our home
Which never can be filled.
You left when life was sweetest,
Only those who love you long for
The one who will be missed so sore.
MR. AND MRS. J. W. TYLER
AND CHILDREN.

Rat Poison Blamed as 6 Are Stricken

(SPECIAL TO CONSTITUTION)
FRANKLIN, N. C., June 23—Mrs. Alfred Eller, wife of a Towns County (Georgia) farmer, three of her children, and two youth friends, were admitted to the Angel Clinic here Monday afternoon in a critical condition after eating rice which was believed to have been contaminated with rat poison.

Physicians attending the victims reported them in a critical condition.

In addition to Mrs. Eller, the other poison victims are Jack, 10; Odell, 13, and Topsy Eller, 8, and Garry, 8 and George Beck, 14, who were guests at the Eller home.

The family physicians at the clinic were told, ate the rice at luncheon Monday, and in less than two hours became violently ill. After being attended by a Towns County physician at the Eller home near Tullis, Ga., they were brought to the clinic here, where physicians made every effort to counteract the effects of the poison.

Mayor Hartsfield is acting under the law which vests in his office the power to make leases at the airport.

SALLY FORTH Says:

Sub-Deb Trio Leaves July 4 For Visit to Mexico City

No one could be more thrilled over a prospective journey than those three pretty subdebs, Lillian Grant, daughter of Josephine and John Grant; Mary Ellen Jones, whose parents are Mary and Bobby Jones; and Winnifred Shackelford, the Bernard Shackelford's daughter, who will depart by train on Independence Day for Birmingham, to join a party headed for Mexico City and the regions beyond.

Lillian, who has just graduated from Washington Seminary, plans to enter the Semple School in New York next Autumn, so her parents are giving her this delightful treat before she has to buckle down to hard work again. Mrs. Margaret Jenison, of Birmingham, a friend of the Grant family, will chaperon the party, which includes also an attractive group of school girls from her home city. Mrs. Jenison has visited Mexico on two previous occasions and knows exactly what surprises the girls will enjoy most and what to omit from their itinerary.

Members of the party enroute at Birmingham on July 6 and from thence they will go to Mexico City, where they will be guests at Hotel Geneva. From this point they will take trips to tropical Fortin and to Taxco, where the silver mines are located; visit the Pyramids and the Floating Gardens and behold all of the treasures which are in store for them in Mexico City itself. If they are fortunate, they will get a glimpse of the glass curtain at the Palace of Fine Arts, which was made by Tiffany & Company at a fabulous sum. If they like Mexican food, they will enjoy the delicious tamale pie at Sanborn's and the toasted tortillas which are novel and tasty.

After a month in Mexico, the party leaves for home on August 3.

SCHWEPPE FAMILY ARRIVES THURSDAY

No visitors of the season will receive a more cordial welcome than those former Atlantans, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Schweppe, their daughter and son, Kate and Palmer Schweppe, of Houston, Texas, who will arrive Thursday to be the guests of Mrs. Schweppe's sister, Mrs. Charles T. Pottinger, and Mr. Pottinger on Rivers Road.

The Schwepes will come here from Washington, D. C., where they have been the guests of another of Mrs. Schweppe's sisters, Mrs. George A. Horkan, and Brig. Gen. Horkan. Previously they visited in Kent, Conn., where they witnessed the graduation of Irving Schweppe, Jr., from the Kent School, and shortly afterwards bade him a fond farewell as he sailed from New York on the Mauretania for England. As a member of the Kent School crew, he will compete with the crews of several English schools for rowing honors.

Honors come easy to Irving, Jr., it seems, for in addition to being a member of the crew, he graduated cum laude, and won any number of other awards, including the chemistry award and the Harvard prize.

Mr. Schweppe will only remain in Atlanta for a few days, but Mrs. Schweppe, Kate and Palmer will be here for some time. After their visit to the Pottingers, they will be guests of their aunt, Mrs. J. C. Kennedy, and of Mr. and Mrs. Granger Hansell at their handsome home, Mimosa Hall, at Roswell.

Miss Harper Weds Harold Eugene Moore

R. H. Harper announces the marriage of his daughter, Miss Doris Harper, to Harold Eugene Moore, of Marietta, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Moore. The ceremony took place recently at the Underwood Memorial Church, with Rev. H. T. Chandler officiating.

Mrs. Julia Lightfoot, of this city, the only attendant, wore a navy blue dress with white accessories. Mack Moore served as best man for his brother.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a white silk dress with matching accessories, and her flowers were orchids. After a wedding trip to Daytona Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Moore will reside at 1751 Howell Mill Rd., N. W.

LOUELLA PARSONS REPORTS:

Movie Waiting for Stewart After Broadway Stunt

HOLLYWOOD, June 23—(INS). The most intriguing offer Jimmy Stewart has had in weeks is one from Darryl Zanuck, to play the reporter who solved the Majczek case in Chicago. Just before Jimmy took off for New York where he pinch-hits for Frank Fay in "Harvey" for the Summer, he had a talk with Darryl about this "Call Northside 777," and it's practically set for him to go into the picture just as soon as he finishes with the stage play.

Perhaps I'd better recall to you that this is the story of the mother who scrubbed floors for 12 years to make enough money to prove her son's innocence.

I've never heard more discussion over a lady than over Joan Caulfield. First she was the star of "A Night Has A Thousand Eyes"—then she wasn't—then she was, and now she isn't. Yep, I get it straight that Joan will be in Johnny Farrow's picture because she is going to be in "The Long Gray Line," the West Point story which stars Alan Ladd.

This is really the authentic story of West Point and will be made in the East just as soon as Alan finishes "Whispering Smith." Remember I told you Mrs. Ladd is going with Alan.

Something is going on with David O. Selznick in New York. His whole staff—president, vice president, and treasurer are in New York for a meeting. Maybe it's to discuss the $5,000,000 they have already taken in for "Duel In The Sun."

After David Wayne was signed by David Selznick, Selznick was so enthusiastic about him that he added Wayne to the cast of "Portrait of Jenny," which is once again going before the cameras. Wayne is the actor who charms the leprechauns in "Finian's Rainbow."

Greta Garbo's so changeable you never know from day to day what's in her mind. But now she's finally set on doing "The Life of George Sand" in France.

She'll make it with George Cukor, according to their plans—and there's a chance that Laurence Olivier will play opposite her.

Walter Seltzer sent a cable from London with chit chat that sounded exactly like Hollywood.

Quoth Walter: "This part of the world is another Sunset Boulevard what with Marlene Dietrich, Rita Hayworth, Linda Darnell, Eleanor Parker, Willie Wyler either here or in Paris."

"Oklahoma" and "Annie Get Your Gun," are great London hits and last night Robert Donat opened in a revival of "A Sleeping Clergyman."

"All of us over here making 'So Evil My Love,' attended the premiere of 'Voice of the Turtle,' with Margaret Sullivan."

1,000 Kids Enjoy Life In Day Camps

Day camps—where kids swim and hike by day, but sleep at home by night—are now keeping 1,000 Atlanta youngsters busy, and happy to spend summertime in town.

The YMCA opened its 14 day camps, scattered throughout Metropolitan Atlanta, Monday and counted 600 campers. Atlanta's is the largest Y day camping program in the United States.

The day camps, scheduled to last through Aug. 1, are divided into three two-week groups. Boys six to fifteen years old may register. The fees are $5 for each two-week session.

LOCATION OF CAMPS

Camps, operating 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. five days a week, are held at Adams Park, College Park City Auditorium, the Central Park School in East Point, Decatur City Camp Area, Druid Hills High School, Haygood School, Central Presbyterian Church, Druid Hills Methodist Church, S. M. Inman School, Morningside Community House, North Avenue Presbyterian Church, Marietta Auditorium, Swimming Pool, North Fulton Park, and Murphy Junior High School.

Three day camps for girls also opened Monday, in addition to the joint Girl Scout Camp Fire Girl camp at Fernbank already in operation.

GIRL SCOUT CAMP

Attracting 75 more teen-age girls, the Girl Scout camp at North Fulton Park also opened Monday. Following this two-week session for teensters, the Scouts plan a month's day camping for pigtailers, 7-10. Special buses wind through North Atlanta and pick up prospective campers near their homes.

North Avenue Presbyterian Church also opened a day camp for girls 7-14 at the church. This program costs $6.75 for each two-week session, plus $1 registration fee. Three two-week sessions are planned.

The Girl Scouts also plan to open another day camp at Adams Park July 21. The first two weeks will be for girls 10-17 and the Box 133, Station O, New York 11, N. Y. Print name, address, zone, size, style number.

Saddle oxfords with crepe soles—shades of prewar days! Crepe soles are now available again, however, in a new synthetic rubber developed by the Du Pont Company. Walking on sun-baked pavements, boardwalks, or beach sand will not cause these soles to spread and buckle, as was the case with some prewar crepe soles. Also, this man-made rubber resists damage from oil, gasoline and kerosene which quickly destroys natural rubber. These saddle oxfords with crepe soles are being made in white leather trimmed with brown, black, blue or red and are available locally.

Congress Probe In Conley Row

A controversy between Army officials at the Atlanta Ordnance Depot and veterans employed at the depot over alleged discriminations against the ex-service men moved Monday toward a Congressional investigation reported to be scheduled for Friday.

Army authorities at the depot said they had not received any official notice of the inquiry, but Washington reports said Rep. James C. Davis, of Georgia's Fifth District, has announced Rep. Robert J. Twyman, Republican, Illinois, and Rep. Laurie C. Battle, Democrat, Alabama, will come to Atlanta for the investigation.

George M. Moore, Chief Counsel for the House Civil Service Committee, is slated to arrive Wednesday for a preliminary probe, and veterans employed at the depot have scheduled a meeting at 8 p. m., Tuesday at the Ansley Hotel.

Retailers To Hear Louis Rothschild

Louis Rothschild, of Washington, D. C., Executive Director of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers, will be the principal speaker at the luncheon of the Southeastern Men's Retailers' Association at 12:30 p. m. today at the Biltmore Hotel.

A native of Washington, Rothschild is a former newspaperman, former lawyer and one-time Director of the Washington Better Business Bureau. Before he became Executive Director of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers, he served as its Washington Counsel.

Members of the Southeastern Men's Retailers' Association are meeting in Atlanta to attend the Men's Apparel Club show of men's wear at the Biltmore.

ELIZABETH WOODWARD SAYS:

A Jealous Person Lets Imagination Run Wild

I don't suppose you would confess it out loud to everybody that you're been bitten by that firebug... jealousy. Which is why few of you write me that you're sick with this malady. But the letters that come in from victims of someone else's jealousy! They make a huge stack!

Girls go with boys who put on terrific sulks and scenes when said girls even talk about the weather with some other boy. Boys go with girls who hurl tantrums if they so much as duty-dance with another girl.

Jealousy is a blight and a blast... and you victims are continually being scorched and singed. In self-defense you write to find out how to handle somebody else's emotion. And that's a tough assignment.

YOU'RE INNOCENT

A jealous person is his own worst enemy. He looks constantly for trouble... and finds it where it isn't. His imagination runs wild. His bilious disposition paints everybody a muddy yellow green.

You can explain till kingdom come... you can plead with him to make sense... you can protest your undying affection for him... you can translate your words and actions so that even a child would understand. And a jealous boy will choose to misinterpret you.

If you care at all about this boy who provokes so easily to jealousy, you turn handsprings to keep him on an even keel. You sidestep twosome conversations on any subject with any other male. You turn down dances and date bids so you won't arouse his ire. You hold yourself in and down so you won't call down his wrath and bitter words upon your own head.

Girls go jealous too... and make life miserable for the boys they like... the boys who like them. They are jealous of the time their boy friends spend with their other boy friends. They're jealous of their smiles, their teasing, their gay, friendly banter with other girls. They're jealous of the girls their boy friends used to like... the other girls who like them... the perfect strangers the boys find easy to look at.

IT'S NOT YOUR PROBLEM

Jealous people are possessive people. They want to own the people and things they like. That's easy enough when it comes to a bicycle or an evening jacket. But you can't own a friend no matter how deeply you wish you could. Even husbands and wives are two separate people who merge some of their interests by choice.

If your pet date flies into fits of jealousy over the things you do or don't do... it's his or her problem... it's not yours. Do the best you can... short of cramping your own style completely.

... to keep things smooth between you. But if the fur flies... you'd better duck out from under. Someone else's violent emotions are more easily avoided than coped with.

Miss Joyce Oberdorfer Wed To Mr. Happ at Temple Rites

Dr. David Marx re the service at the brilliant nuptial ceremony at which Miss Joyce Oberdorfer was married to Frank Morris Happ, of Macon, last evening at The Temple on Peachtree Road, the lovely young bride representing the third generation of her family for whom Dr. Marx has officiated in a similar capacity. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Oberdorfer, parents of the bride, were hosts at an elaborate reception at the Standard Club following the ceremony. Mr. Happ is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Happ, of Macon.

MRS. FRANK M. HAPP

Dr. Charles Sheldon, organist, and John Drury, soloist, presented a musical program during the assembling of the wedding guests. Giant Woodwardia ferns were massed to the rear of the Temple altar to form a backdrop for myriads of cathedral tapers burning in seven-branched candelabra, and tall white wicker vases filled with madonna lilies and white gladioli. Tail flusters of madonna lilies marked the entrance to the pews down the central aisle, and the wall niches were adorned with urns of lilies.

BRIDAL GOWN

Mr. Oberdorfer gave his daughter in marriage. She was a regal figure in her wedding gown, a sculptured model of ivory-toned duchesse satin, the portrait neckline outlined in heirloom lace which was worn by her mother, the former Miss Lala Hirsch, at her marriage. The skirt swept into a formal train, and the bridal veil of illusion fell from a becoming medieval cap of heirloom lace. Completing the exquisite ensemble was a bouquet of white orchids.

showered with white lilies. Miss Gail Oberdorfer was her sister's maid of honor, and Mrs. Joseph Dodd Cook was matron of honor. The bridesmaids included Miss Ruth Manning, of Pittsburgh; Miss Renee Kaufman, of New York; Miss Ruth Weil, of Goldsboro, N. C.; Mrs. Robert R. Mendelson, of Cleveland, Ohio; Misses Margaret Strauss, Patricia Schoen, Ann Hirschberg and Virginia Dickson.

The attendants were gowned alike in picturesque models of maize marquisette, the off-the-shoulder necklines outlined with fichu ruffles and the skirts featuring draped tunics. Across the back of their heads they wore matching net bandeaux studded with orange blossoms, and they carried bouquets of Marconi daisies clustered with lilies.

Elaine Lesser, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lesser, was the flower girl. She wore a floor-length frock of white mousseline and carried a miniature bouquet of yellow daisies.

The groom's father, Frank R. Happ, was best man, and the groomsmen were Gus B. Kaufman, Horace Kaplan, Bert Michael, Leonard Kaplan, Robert Young, David Decker, all of Macon; Donald Oberdorfer, Jr., and Joseph D. Cook.

Serving as ushers were Oscar Strauss, Jr., Donald Oberdorfer, Sr., Gabriel H. Schoen, I. B. Lichtenhal, Judge Herman Moser, of Baltimore; Samuel Hirsch, Sr., David Marx, Jr., Lawrence Fox, Joseph Asher, Frank Ferst, James W. Taylor, of Dallas, Texas, and Percy W. Zacharias, of Jacksonville.

RECEPTION AT CLUB
Mr. and Mrs. Oberdorfer and the bride couple received the reception guests standing before a screen of palms and ferns flanked at either side with floor vases of lilies. The beautifully appointed bride's table was centered with a plateau of lilies and white gladioli, while the buffet tables were adorned with plateaux of pastel-tinted garden flowers.

Mrs. Oberdorfer received her guests wearing a handsome gown of cafe-au-lait lace over shell pink. A mantilla of pink chiffon over-

Mrs. Tillie H. Tolson Weds Mr. Wellborn in Alabama

An announcement of wide interest is that of the marriage of Mrs. Tillie Harsh Tolson, of Anniston, formerly of this City, to John Dent Wellborn, of Anniston, formerly of Atlanta.

The ceremony took place on Saturday at the plantation home of the groom's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wellborn, at Maxwell, Ala., in the presence of only members of the two families. William Weatherly, of Anniston, served as best man.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Wellborn entertained at a reception. Among out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Harsh Tolson, of Atlanta; Fuchs Mattheus and Miss Elizabeth Mattheus, of Anniston.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. E. S. Harsh, of this City. Mr. Wellborn is the son of M. B. Wellborn, of Anniston, a former Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank.

Mrs. Andrew Calhoun and Mrs. Albert Thornton are attending the Garden Club of America convention being held in Milwaukee, Wis.

Albany's Dan Brosnan Runs Horses as Hobby

ALBANY, June 23—Mr. Dan J. Brosnan, of Albany, owns seven race horses which are now stabled at Eastern tracks.

Brosnan hasn't been in the horse-racing business very long. Rather, he says, it isn't a business, but a hobby, which it had better be for everybody in it, as it isn't too sure a way to make a living.

The government clamped a ban on horse racing during part of 1943, one of the war years. Therefore, a lot of horses, good ones, were sold cheap as their owners didn't have the money or the desire to keep feeding them with no chance of winning feed money.

Therefore, a friend of Brosnan's telephoned him and asked if he would like to buy a race horse. Dan, for some unknown reason, said yes, and paid $2,000 for a solid two-year-old colt named Transfron.

He bought this colt from Roscoe Goose, who breeds horses on his Kentucky farm. Goose is a former jockey and old-timers will recall his victory in the Kentucky Derby with Donerail, a 100-1 shot, which is the longest priced winner of the race in history.

Transfron has proven a good investment for Brosnan, his latest victory being last New Year's Eve at Tropical Park in Miami.

Danny J. Brosnan's stable has fluctuated in the number of horses. At one time he owned 12, but now has only seven, with one of these temporarily out of competition because of one of those race horse ailments.

His best horse, he says, is a four-year-old colt named Danny J. There is a story to his buying Danny J. Brosnan and several horsemen were gathered after the 1944 Kentucky Derby in one of those horsemen's gathering places in Louisville. Joe Knight, another Kentuckian who breeds horses, asked Brosnan if he wanted to buy Gallahadion's first colt.

Gallahadion is the horse which won the derby a few years ago. So, with this in mind, Brosnan again said yes to the offer and paid $1,000 for Danny J. as a yearling, eight unseens.

He sent his trainer, John Halley, out to look the colt over and Halley came back with the report that Danny J. looked like a real horse.

Danny proved this prediction by winning $7,300 as a two-year-old. He was nominated for the 1946 Kentucky Derby, but didn't come around in training and therefore wasn't entered.

Footballer's Namesake One of Brosnan's most dependable veterans is a six-year-old colt named Dan Miller, after the old Notre Dame football star.

Dan claimed Dan Miller as a two-year-old for $1,600 and since that time the little chestnut has won more than $15,000 in purses. Dan Miller is a front runner and when he breaks on top of the field usually goes on to win. He is a sprinter and once ran six furlongs in the brilliant time of 1:10 at Tropical Park.

Misses On 90-1 Shot Brosnan occasionally likes to make sentimental wagers on his horses and laughingly recalls the time one of his horses won at 90 to 1, but didn't have a nickel on him.

"Halley called me one night," he recalled, "and told me our horse named Cyclorama had been training well and had a good chance to win a maiden race in a couple of days."

However, the next day Halley called back and said the race for which he had figured Cyclorama had been cancelled but that the horse was eligible for another race against older and more experienced horses. He said Cyclorama was running well but he was doubtful of his ability to defeat this field.

"Therefore, I passed him up. He broke on top and got off to a five-length lead, finally winning in a photo finish."

"He paid $187.40 and I didn't have a nickel on him."

Poor Living, Good Hobby Brosnan has a lot of fun with his horses, but doesn't advise anybody to try and make a living out of racing. "I've won my share of races," he said, "but all in all, I guess I've just about broken even. However, that is better than most people do."

One might think that racing is an easy way to make money, considering the size of purses nowadays and that a horse like Whirlaway or Arched can win more than half a million dollars, which will buy a lot of hay.

But Brosnan figures it costs about $10 per day per horse, including feed, labor and veterinary bills. That's $3,650 a year for each horse and not many of them running today average that much.

It boils down to the fact that a horse should win a race every three months to pay his board bill.

"If you have them to do that, you're lucky," Brosnan laughed.

Two Freshmen Lead In NCAA Golf Meet

ANN ARBOR, Mich., June 23 — (AP) — An annoying cross-course wind sent scores skyrocketing but not for a couple of Freshman club swingers who managed to hold their own and stroke out par 72s today to pace the field for the opening 18-hole play in the 36-hole qualifying round for the 1947 National Collegiate Athletic Association championship.

Oklahoma A&M's Bo Winger, 24-year-old veteran of more than three years of Navy service, and San Jose State's Bob Harris, an 18-year-old, matched standard figures for the University of Michigan's none-too-easy course to take command over a record field of 303 collegians.

Winger and Harris toured the outgoing nine in one-over-par 37, but followed the homeward trail in one-under 35a late in the day.

The Oklahoma Aggie freshman's total put the A&M team into potential "dark horse" role for the NCAA team championship, which will be determined Wednesday at the end of the second 18-hole round of the qualifier.

Tom Green, of Georgia Tech combined an outgoing 44 with a 41 on the back side to card an 85. Junius J. Herbert, of LSU had a 77, and Jim Wittenberg and Joe Moore, Jr. also from LSU had 75s, in other Southern scores.

Tournament officials fell short of their scheduled opening day quota of more than 200 finishers they had hoped to cram over the course in the 18-hole opener. First-round play is scheduled to continue until noon Tuesday, with the final 18 holes of the medal play slated for that afternoon and all day Wednesday.

Two More Tilts Set Tonight

By F. M. WILLIAMS.

The Crackers, taking a double-header from the Memphis Chicks, 7 to 2 and 5 to 4, swept all the way from sixth to fourth place Monday night, overlapping both the Birmingham Barons, who split with Little Rock, and the Nashville Vols who were idle at Mobile.

It was an appropriate time for Manager Ki Ki Cuyler's club to get back in the first division, for the largest Monday night crowd in Ponce de Leon Park history.

Jackie Price, famed Cleveland Indian coach, put on a 45-minute act between Monday night's double-header at Ponce de Leon Park, much to the delight of one of the season's largest week-day crowds.

Price threw balls to two different men at the same time, batted and fielded while hanging by his heels on a bar, and caught ground and fly balls while driving a jeep around the outfield.

He was aided in his act by Cracker Catcher Mike Ulinney and Utility Man Jimmy Blair.

11,945—welcomed the Crackers home from their recent road trip. Four men, two hitters and two pitchers, shared honors in the twin triumph.

In the first game Babe Ellis rapped across six runs, four of them on a grand slam, to give Rookie Lou Bush his third win of the year against one loss.

And in the second it was Charley Trippi, the hard-hitting right-fielder, who smashed the two crucial blows that helped Dewey Adkins win his eighth game. Adkins hurled beautiful ball after the third inning.

Trippi, after hitting a triple for one run and scoring the tying marker himself in the fourth inning, rapped a long double to right in the eighth to score Mike Ulinney, who also doubled, with the winning run.

The two clubs meet in another double-header Tuesday night at 7 o'clock with George Diehl and Forrest Thompson hurling for Atlanta and probably Ken Polivka and Homer Spragins for the Chicks.

FIRST GAME

An error on a perfect double-play ball by Glick put the Chicks in front in the second. Kluszewski bounced a slow over Bush's head for an infield hit. Deal rolled to Glick, who let the ball go through his legs. Kluszewski moving to third. Hodge then hit into a twin killing, Glick to Steiner to Buccola, with Kluszewski scoring on the play.

Kluszewski, the League's leading hitter, opened the fourth with his second hit, a line drive double to center field that Cieslak bobbled just long enough for Kluszewski to run to third. Deal grounded out but Hodge singled over second to drive the runner home.

Steiner looped a single into left for the first Cracker hit to open the bottom half of the fourth. Cieslak's sizzling liner hit right at Hamner's feet and bounced off his glove for another single. Glick bunted perfectly between Hoerst and Hodge and was safe along with both other Cracker runners to load the bases. Ellis then slammed a home run over the third tier of signs in right center, one of the longest hit balls seen in Ponce de Leon this year.

Ellis came through again in the fifth to put the Crackers out front, 6 to 2. Bush beat out an infield hit. Trippi, trying to sacrifice popped out but Cieslak rapped a single to left and Glick walked to load the bases. After working the count to 3 and 2, Ellis singled to center, driving Bush and Cieslak home.

Deal dropped Buccola's fly for a

Boggan Hurls

No-Hitter To

Beat Owls, 5-1

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

Constitution Sports Writer

JACKSON, Miss., June 23—Big George Boggan, 185-pound right hander, pitched a seven-inning no-hit game and fanned 15 men as Central High, of Jackson, Miss., defeated West Fulton, of Atlanta, 5-1, in the opening round of the double elimination Southeastern High School tournament at Fairgrounds Park here Monday night.

No one came close to getting a hit off the strapping fellow who walked five. Walter Butler fanned six and walked nine while allowing the host club only four hits. Hoyt West will hurl for West Fulton Tuesday night.

West Fulton scored a run in the first half of the first. Conn and Walraven walked in succession. Crawford was out when he hunted foul on a third strike. Richardson's pop was dropped back of second by second sacker Windham but Walraven was forced at second on the play to shortstop Allgood who threw wildly to third trying to head off Conn. Conn continued on home on the leave.

Jackson went ahead, 2-1, in their half on a single by Windham, walks to Boggan and Powers, a hit batsman, Alford, and another walk to Allgood. The bases were left jammed as Coker rolled out.

Pope walked, was sacrificed to second by Windham and scored on a scratchy infield hit to first base by Boggan to give Jackson a third run the second.

Boggan fanned seven Owls in the first three innings. The Tigers got two runs without a hit in the fourth to make it 5-1. Coker and Pope drew walks and after a passed ball moved the runners to second and third, both scored on Windham's squeeze bunt which Butler threw away at first base.

The defeat left Johnson City as West Fulton's Tuesday night foe. Ft. Lauderdale's Flying L's, mipped Science Hill's Hippobears, of Johnson City, Tenn., 3-2, in the first game as Teddy Weygant bested Billy Bowman, who gave up only four hits, in a mound duel. Weygant fanned 13, and Bowman 12.

Jack Kramer Advances In Wimbledon Tourney

WIMBLEDON, June 23—(AP)—Californian Jack Kramer set the pace by dropping only one game in a straight set victory Monday as all eight seeded men's singles players marched through the first round of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

Kramer, top-seeded favorite, disposed of Bill Moss, of Britain, 6-0, 6-1, 6-0, losing only the fifth game in the second set when he netted three balls.

Tom Brown, of San Francisco, who ranked third, just squeaked through against Eric Sturgess, of the South African Davis Cup team, 7-5, 5-7, 6-2, 2-6, 8-6.

John Bromwich, of Australia, seeded second, lost seven games in his straight-set triumph over Jost Spitzer, of Switzerland, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

Donny Pails, the Australian champion, breezed past L. E. Carter, of Britain, 6-1, 6-0, 6-1 and Geoff Brown, the other seeded Australian, was never extended in stopping Bill Robertson, of the United States, 6-1, 6-0, 6-3.

Yvon Petra, of France, the defending champion, smashed Don Butler, of Britain, 6-2, 7-5, 6-0, and Bob Falkenberg, of Los Angeles, who won the London championships last week, trounced Philippe Washer, of Belgium, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

Juroslav Drobny, the Czech star who eliminated Kramer last year in this same tourney, knocked out Francisco (Pancho) Segura, of Ecuador, in one of the opening

Capital Notables Coming

By LORRAINE NELSON

WASHINGTON, June 23. (AP)—Fred M. Vinson, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the United States Ambassador to the Russian State, Nikolai V. Novikov, will be among guests about a special train which will stop briefly in Atlanta early Wednesday en route to Warm Springs, Ga., for the dedication of the Little White House.

Acting Gov. Thompson Monday ordered the State Capitol closed Wednesday in observance of Warm Springs Day, which he proclaimed. The day is a public holiday, but not a legal holiday, and therefore does not affect banks.

The dedication ceremonies are scheduled at 2 p. m. Wednesday. Others who will go from Washington to Warm Springs include members of the Washington diplomatic corps, Senators and Representatives in Congress, members of the President's Cabinet and private life.

Among these will be Mrs. Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice; Supreme Court Justices Hugo Black, Mr. and Mrs. T. McCreary, Gov. William M. Tucker of Virginia, Ambassador Alberto Tarchiani, of Italy; Belgium, Dr. Juraj Slavik, Ambassador of Czechoslovakia; Ambassador Charles Bruggeman, of Switzerland; Ambassador Oscar Ivanisse-Morgenstern, of Norway; Ambassador Leonid Winiwicz, of Poland; and Ambassador Savan Kosanovic, of Yugoslavia.

Others who will attend the ceremonies but who will not be in the special train include Gov. James M. Burch, of Alabama; Bernard C. Clark, of New York; Robert Leighton McCarthy and Harrison Jones.

Special Buses Assigned
For Warm Spring Trip

Special buses will leave Atlanta at 10 a. m. Wednesday from the Greyhound Bus Depot at 21 Cain. The buses will be used for the dedication of the Little White House as a national shrine in memory of the late President Roosevelt.

The buses will stop en route to enable passengers to have a look at the site of the late President's death. The ceremonies are over between 3:30 and 4 p. m.

Extra buses for Warm Springs will leave Columbus at 11 a. m.

Pastors Hear
Lon Sullivan

By THOMAS M. ELLIOTT

Lon Sullivan, Secretary of the Georgia Citizens Council, told a group of nearly 100 Methodist pastors Monday that Atlanta's problems of crime and juvenile delinquency are a result of the city's failure to provide a better environment for its youth.

He asserted that every agency working for the betterment of youth is handicapped by the lack of leadership and that churches and civic organizations are in their labor for a definite objective, rather than for individual projects. He stated that of the 97,000 boys and girls in the city, 10,000, or 10 percent, are not reached by any of the organizations for youth.

State Approves Pacts
For $1,576,000

The State Highway Department Monday accepted low bids totaling $1,576,000 on nine highway projects.

The bids were opened Friday, but they were not formally accepted until Monday, pending a routine study to see if the bids met to approve the bids is the Public Roads Administration, a Federal agency.

The bids were $184,000 under the Highway Department's cost estimate.
